'WAGES KEPT UP,' HOOVER DECLARES

President, in an Address to Labor, Tells of Industry's Pledge at Conference

Text of President Hoover's address on page 7.

With President Hoover expressing optimism for the future, the American Federation of Labor convention opened at Hotel Statler today, demanding modification of the Volstead Act, relief of unemployment and the five-day week.

Escorted by five labor leaders, President and Mrs. Hoover arrived at the Statler shortly before 3 o'clock.

The blaring of bands mingled with cheers of assembled Legionnaires as the presidential party moved through the roped-off lobby to the special elevator which took them to the convention hall. Mrs. Hoover sat on the platform with the President.

Four hundred and eighteen delegates and their friends who crowded the convention hall, heard President Hoover express satisfaction that out of the present depression has arisen a new basis of co-operation between capital, labor and government.

TEAM PLAY HELPED

The new team play, the President said, has successfully weathered the storm and brightened the whole outlook for the economic future of the country.

He pointed out that for the first time in a century of recurrent depressions, the present slump has been almost free from bitter industrial conflict.

President Hoover, who received a tremendous ovation when he stepped to the rostrum, said in part:

Toll of Conferences

"We are justified in feeling that something like a new and improved tool has been added to

Allen Greets President

THE ROAR OF THE PRESIDENTIAL salute was in the air when Gov. Allen extended the greeting of Massachusetts to President Hoover at the Back Bay station. The crowd roared, too, and with bows, smiles and waving hats, the President was whisked away for a busy day. (Staff photo.)

Sidelights of Fifth Game

Rain has been threatening ever since yesterday morning, and, according to the local weather sharps, but won't materialize until after today's game. We hope that dope is correct. The stories will be pretty long without any postponement.

It's still very warm, however. The topcoats were parked when we arrived Thursday are still parked.

Sunday's crowd of about 30 less than forty thousand was the largest to ever attend a game in St. Louis. From the way the fans are pouring in for today's game, it doesn't look as though the attendance would be quite as large, but there won't be many, if any, vacant seats. The 31 and 42 inch seats were packed on hour before game time.

Graham McNamee and Babe Ruth received the well-known

Coolidge, Forced to Talk, Gets as Far as 'Save'

American Legion delegates literally forced Calvin Coolidge to make a speech at the Arena today. Here it is:

"To save the time of this convention I am going to give you one sentence. You paid your debt to Lafayette, but you still owe a debt to yourselves and to the United States."

Commander Bodenhamer, introducing the distinguished guests after President Hoover's address, announced that there would be no speeches, but when former President Coolidge was introduced the legionnaires would not be denied:

"Speech! Speech!" they shouted.

The demonstration lasted eight minutes. The former President wavered. Mrs. Coolidge urged him to comply.

The Vermont standard bearer waved his banner as a hint for Coolidge to comply and finally he again arose, walked to the edge of the platform and raised his hand for silence.

"Mr. President, Mr. National Commander, guests and delegates," he began. "To save..."

At the word "save," the Legionnaires, recalling Coolidge economy, burst into cheering, then quieted while the former President made his single sentence address.

He sat down amid tremendous din. Mrs. Coolidge was introduced and the crowd demanded a speech from her, but she waved her hand, smiling, and returned to her chair on the platform. "Cal" had done all the speechmaking for the family.

VETS WILDLY ACCLAIM HOOVER

After Ten-Minute Ovation He Declares Legion Makes the Peace of U. S. Secure

President Hoover told the 12th annual convention of the American Legion here today that the "peace of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment," and the realization of the Legionnaires' ideal to promote peace and good will through active citizenship "is the greatest guaranty of its continuance."

A wild outburst of cheering, stamping of feet and whistling, mingled with beating of drums and a cascade of sound from the brass instruments of all the bands, greeted President and Mrs. Hoover as they stepped upon the platform. The ovation lasted 10 minutes.

Both the President and Mrs. Hoover stepped to the front of the stage and bowed in silent acknowledgment of the thunderous applause. All in the crowd were on their feet. Hats were rocketing through the air.

National Commander Bodenhamer thanked the President for the "rare privilege" of having his

FOXX HOMER SCORES TWO RUNS IN NINTH

Shouting and Clanging Bells, They Yell for Cards, and the Betting Is Heavy

Sportsmans Park, St. Louis, Oct. 6—Surrounded by a frenzied throng of 30,000 shouting, yipping and cowbell clanging baseball bugs, the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals, deadlocked two games to two, came to grips here today

Threatening clouds hung low over the field but they failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the capacity crowd as Max Bishop, leadoff man for the A's came to bat, and Burleigh started to add a little saliva to the apple.

Bishop started the A's off inauspiciously by fanning. Dykes rolled out to Gelbert, but Mickey Cochrane started the hitting early by smashing out a single. Al Simmons couldn't capitalize and Gelbert ran behind second base to pull it down.

A light misty rain was falling when the Cardinals came to bat for their half of the opening frame. Douthit rolled out to Foxx and Sparky Adams proceeded to square

LABOR VOICES DEMAND FOR MODIFICATION OF THE DRY LAW

the working kit for the solution of our future problems," President Hoover said in expressing gratification over the results of his business and labor conferences at the White House last November.

It was at these conferences that Mr. Hoover set in motion efforts on a nationwide scale to mitigate the depression. Analyzing the results today, he said:

"These, the first undertakings of this character in our history, have been carried out in astonishing degree. There are, of course, exceptions, but in the large sense our great manufacturing companies, the railways, utilities, and business houses have been able to maintain the established wages. Employers have spread their employment systematically. For the first time in more than a century of these recurring depressions we have been practically free of bitter industrial conflict."

Declaring new inventions and discoveries had intensified many problems in adjusting "technological unemployment," he said there was no reason to believe the American economic system could not be revolved in such fashion as to further increase standards of living and thereby "continue to absorb men who are displaced in the older industries."

"It certainly is not the purpose of our competitive system," he said, "that it should produce a competition which destroys stability in an industry and reduces to poverty all those within it. No purpose is rather to maintain that degree of competition which induces progress as dynamic to the consumer. If our regulatory laws be at fault they should be revised."

Elaborating on the wage question, Mr. Hoover said both the directors of industry and labor leaders "have made great progress toward a new and common ground in economic conceptions, which, I am confident, has had a profound effect upon our economic progress during the last few years."

INTERESTS HELD MUTUAL

"That is the conception," he said, "that must be constantly renovated by scientific research and invention; that labor welcomes these labor-saving devices; that labor gives its full and unrestricted effort to reduced cost by use of these machines and methods; that the savings from these reduced costs shall be shared between labor, employer and the consumer.

"It is philosophy of mutual interest. It is a practice of cooperation for an advantage that is not only mutual but universal.

"Labor gains either through increase of wage or reduction of cost of living or shortened hours. Employers gain through enlarged consumption and a wider spread of distribution of their products. Consumers gain through lower cost of what they buy. Indeed, mass production must be accompanied by mass consumption through increased standards of living."

Such a system of industrial relations, he added, is much better than "doles of various kinds which limit the independence of men."

Mr. Hoover said an increase of $500,000,000 in the last eight months of public and private construction had helped take up the "slack of unemployment."

CALLS FOR MODIFICATION.

The demand for light wine and beer, employment of the jobless and shorter working hours, was contained in the report of the executive council read by President William Green.

It followed an invocation by Cardinal O'Connell and addresses of welcome by Governor Allen, Mayor Curley and President James T. Moriarty of the Massachusetts State Federation.

Because President Hoover did not want to interfere with the broadcast of the World Series baseball game, President Green planned to read the chief executive's speech to a radio audience at the conclusion of the baseball broadcast.

CARDINAL IN RED ROBES.

The convention was formally opened by F. Harry Dunning, chairman of the convention committee of the Boston Central Labor Union, who introduced President Nathan Sidd of that organization.

After welcoming the delegates President Sidd presented Cardinal O'Connell in his red robes of office, in whose honor the orchestra played the cardinal's own composition, "Hymn to the Holy Name."

The Cardinal, who was accompanied by Rev. Francis J. Phelan of the Cathedral, said:

"It gives me great pleasure to come here, especially to offer to Almighty God our thanks and to beseech Him to give us His grace and His blessing. I hope on another occasion, Friday afternoon, to address you."

PRAYER FOR BLESSING

The Cardinal then offered the following prayer:

"Almighty and Eternal Father, who has blessed and sanctified the toil of our hands, we come into Thy sacred presence to adore Thy goodness and implore Thy help.

"Grant us to see the justice of Thy eternal laws and give us wisdom and strength to walk in Thy light. Give us counsel to understand Thy holy will and the courage and fortitude to say and to do the right, to learn not only what is our duty by law but what is our duty to Thee, to our neighbor and to our country.

"This we ask in the name of Thy divine Son, who labored and toiled not for Himself but for us and all mankind of every class and race and clime and who taught us humbly to say to Thee: Our Father, who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name; Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven; give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. Amen."

HAS STRENGTH FOR TASK

President Moriarty, extending the greetings of the State Federation, said:

"We will show the world that we can take care of the unemployment situation as nobody has been able to do up to the present time."

The council in its report stressed the demand for modification of the Volstead Act as a partial remedy for unemployment. It reiterated its previous assertions that the Volstead Act had failed to promote true temperance, and that evil social conditions have followed the failure of its enforcement.

Referring to a communication by the executive officers of the A. F. of L. to the chairman of the national law observance and enforcement commission, the report said:

"It was shown that many industries, including mining, agricultural, transportation, building and other miscellaneous industries were seriously affected; that thousands of men employed in the breweries of the country were forced out and have been compelled to seek employment in other lines.

"All of this has seriously aggravated the unemployment situation. The social effect resulting from a violation of the law, the making of home brew, the speakeasy, and the illegal manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, has had a depressing and demoralizing effect upon our national and social life.

REDUCE HARD LIQUORS

"We are of the firm opinion that the Volstead Act should be amended without violating the provisions of the 18th amendment. Such an amendment would provide for the manufacture of beer containing 2.75 per cent alcohol by weight, and as a result we are of the opinion that temperance would be promoted and the demoralizing and degrading effects which follow the excessive use of intoxicating liquors purchased and manufactured illegally, would be reduced to a minimum."

Under labor's unemployment program, the report set forth the need of providing aid in finding employment as the first constructive policy, preferably a federal agency.

The State, according to the report, should also provide data on unemployment and employment indices that trends and other inform data necessary as the basis for constructive planning.

As remedies for unemployment the program proposes reduction in hours of work, daily and weekly; prohibition of industry; efficient management in production and in sales policies; adequate records of public works to meet cyclical unemployment; vocational guidance and retraining; study of effect of technological unemployment; study of relief proposals, and education for leisure.

The five-day week, according to the council, is now benefiting 2,500,000 workers, with an accompanying increase of wages sufficient to make up for the hours of employment lessened. The report emphasizes that a vacation without pay is not a vacation.

MOVEMENT IS SPREADING

Forty-eight national and international unions are in part enjoying the five-day week, the building trades leading, with Massachusetts having 20,000 affected.

Emphasis was laid on the right to organize, a major obstacle to which was said to be the abuse of the injunction in industrial disputes. Endorsement was made of the bill drafted by the sub-committee of the Senate committee on judiciary, designed to remedy many of the practices "that have robbed us of opportunity to exercise our rights."

Regarding older workers, who, in many cases, are unable to obtain employment, the council recommended that all state federations urge upon their state bureaus the necessity for making studies of older workers. The council also urged continuation of efforts to secure legislation in all states to provide old age pensions.

7 STATES JOIN BRAZILIAN REVOLT

Insurgent Leaders, Cheered by New Strength, Reject Peace Offers

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Brazilian revolutionary movement, headed by a Francisco Flores Da Cunha, today claimed that seven states had joined in the fight against the government of President Washington Luis and the President-elect, Julio Prestes.

The movement has gone forward rapidly in Rio Grande Do Sul, the seat of the insurgents. The new states involved are Piahuy, Ceara, Rio Grande Do Norte, Parahyba, Pernambuco, Minas Geraes and Ceiulio Vargas.

Owing to the gravity of the situation, President Luis today decreed martial law throughout Brazil until Dec. 31.

All banks were closed today until further orders, and the government has suspended airmail service out of the country on the Pan American, Condor and French aero postal lines.

Advices from the border town of Rivera say that the revolutionists have conscripted every man of between 21 and 35 and that an army is being formed to move upon Sao Paulo, great seaport and coffee exporting center.

Insurgent leaders in both Rio Grande Do Sul and Minas Geraes were said today to have refused to accept peace offers put them by the Rio De Janeiro government.

3 TOWNS FIGHT NORWELL FIRE

Firemen of three towns today fought a woods fire in Norwell, off Pond st., while the flames threatened to sweep down on cottages at Accord Pond.

The fire, for several hours, was out of control as it was fanned by a stiff northwest wind.

HOOVER GIVEN HEAVY GUARD

Extraordinary precautions were taken today to guard against any embarrassing situation developing during President Hoover's visit here.

State troopers, 500 Boston police and a corps of secret service men attended every move of the presidential party from the moment of its arrival at Back Bay station.

Two Boston inspectors, Thomas Towie and Frank Foggerty, joined the Hoover train at Providence.

A small army of secret service agents was under direction of Harry Barker, the Washington chief, who arrived in Boston Saturday.

No person save his guards and members of his party were allowed within 100 feet of the President at any time. The lower platform of the Back Bay station was cleared of all except the reception committee and the press during his arrival and police held back the throng on the upper level while the party moved to waiting automobiles.

The utmost precautions were taken at the Copley-Plaza Hotel Wednesday, when the guards and members of the presidential party was allowed on the sixth floor, which was reserved for President and Mrs. Hoover. Police were on guard on the roofs of buildings adjoining.

attendance at the convention.

The President reached Boston at 9:30 a. m., and was accorded a warm reception by several thousand Legionnaires gathered in the vicinity of the Back Bay station.

As the seven-car presidential special rolled to a stop the first reverberations of the 21-gun presidential salute thundered across the city, the Fairmount, W. Va., Legion Band lined up in front of the station and played "Hail to the Chief," and overhead four army planes zoomed in echelon formation.

OFFICIAL WELCOME

With President and Mrs. Hoover in the party were George Akerson, the President's secretary; Miss Ruth Fesler, secretary to Mrs. Hoover; Capt. C. R. Train, naval aide; Col. C. B. Hedges, army aide; William M. Butler, Republican senatorial nominee; secret service operatives and Washington newspaper correspondents.

Mayor Curley and Gov. Allen were the first to greet the President and Mrs. Hoover as they stepped off the observation platform. With the two officials in the reception committee were Col. Carroll J. Swan, director of the Legion convention activities; Congressman Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell, John Richardson of the distinguished citizens' committee and Mary Curley, daughter of the mayor.

The "First Lady" smilingly accepted a huge bouquet tendered by Miss Curley.

The extraordinary precautions taken to guard against a repetition of the Cleveland communist demonstration on the occasion of the President's visit there last week had resulted in the clearing of the entire lower level of the Back Bay station of all except the reception committee and newspapermen.

On the upper level several thousand legionnaires in uniform were gathered and outside the station, in Dartmouth st., the First Corps of Cadets was drawn up as the escort of honor.

The reception throng lined Dartmouth st. eight and 10 deep and massed on the two bridges.

President and Mrs. Hoover walked to the upper level from the train platform of the station. The President doffed his silk hat to the legionnaires, who stood on the station waiting room seats to cheer him as he walked through the cars lined up in Dartmouth st.

JOYOUS WELCOME

In their motor, proceeding to the Copley-Plaza hotel the President and the First Lady were escorted by eight motorcycle policemen with the secret service men immediately preceding and following and Richard Jarvis, the President's special guard, standing on the running board of the presidential car.

Through the lanes of cheering thousands with uniforms bright spatterings of color in the sun, the presidential party was whisked to Copley sq. and around to the Trinity pl. entrance to the Copley-Plaza.

In the square in front of the hotel the crack Harper-Van Dyke legion band of Detroit played "Hail to the Chief" and then formed in the hotel lobby to render "Over There" and "Hinky, Dinky" as the President and Mrs. Hoover stepped into an elevator and were whisked to the sixth floor private suit of Arthur ... Race, the hotel manager. The entire floor was reserved for them.

3 ADDRESSES HERE

At the hotel while resting before his start for the Arena to address the veterans, President Hoover received former President Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge, Louis K. Liggett, Republican national committeeman, was another caller.

Senatorial Candidate Butler had joined the presidential party at Providence for breakfast on the train.

Other callers at the president's suite included Hanford MacNider, American minister to Canada and former national commander of the Legion; Leverett Saltonstall, speaker of the House; Mrs. Nathaniel W. Thayer, Republican national committeewoman from Massachusetts; John S. Lawrence of the New England Council and Gen. Milton J. Foreman of Chicago, first commander of the Legion.

During the wait for the President's start for the convention, the Harper-Van Dyke band continued its serenade in Copley sq., and several thousand Legionnaires and passersby gathered on the square and Trinity pl. sides of the hotel.

In addition to his Legion address, President Hoover attended the Governor's luncheon at the Copley-Plaza and later in the day will address the American Federation of Labor convention at Hotel Statler.

Facing the war veterans at the Boston Arena, Mr. Hoover urged the legion to "renew and expand" its mission of citizenship through the teaching in every community of the essentials of good-will toward foreign peoples, that the foundations of government is respect for law and the road to self-government is through "discharge of our obligations at the ballot box."

PART OF SAFETY

"We need," he said, "the teaching of the essentials of good-will toward other nations in every community—that the foundations of peace arise from the sense of justice within the citizenry of a nation.

"We need the teaching that the foundation of government is respect for law. A quickened interest on the part of the community can insist upon proper enforcement of law, can arouse public opinion, while an condition of lawlessness remains unchecked in that community.

"You can impress upon the citizens that the road of self-government is through the discharge of our obligations at the ballot box; to understand that the basis of defense is a willingness to serve in our citizen soldiery; actively to participate in these and a multitude of duties of citizens—all are an inseparate part of the safety and progress of the nation.

"Through your local posts you can awaken the minds of the communities throughout our nation to a higher ideal of citizenship.

Coolidges Join Hands With Legion

MRS. COOLIDGE LEVERETT SALTONSTALL CALVIN COOLIDGE

FORMER PRESIDENT and Mrs. Coolidge came back to their own Boston today to join with the American Legion in convention here. The former President was given a wild welcome by the Legionnaires. He is shown here with Mrs. Coolidge, while Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House of Representatives, attendant to Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, is shown looking over the right shoulder of the former President. (Staff photo.)

MRS. COOLIDGE HAS CHAT WITH MRS. HOOVER

An ex-President's wife greeted a President's wife and then the formality was over.

Friends of years, Mrs. Herbert Hoover took Mrs. Calvin Coolidge into the privacy of her suite at the Copley-Plaza hotel today and, behind closed doors, the presidential wives went into a huddle.

Calvin and Mrs. Coolidge arrived to do the necessary honors immediately following the brief interview Mrs. Hoover had accorded a small group of Boston newspaper workers.

Escorted by the President's military aide, Col. Campbell D. Hodges, the members of the press were personally introduced to Mrs. Hoover, who shook the hands of each person.

"I am so glad to see you," she said, immediately adding, "You know I am never interviewed, so you mustn't ask me any questions. But when Col. Hodges told me that there were Boston newspaper folk who wanted to see me, I thought how nice it would be to say hello to them, and so I am."

JUST A GREETING

Mrs. Hoover was asked to express some sentiment on coming to Boston on such an occasion, but graciously declined, and then retired into the presidential suite.

It wasn't really an interview but a cheerful greeting for the press from the first lady of the land, who, true to her word, is never interviewed, unless as she explained today, she talks for some cause for the Girl Scout movement.

Mrs. Hoover was officially welcomed to the city by Miss Mary Curley, Mayor James M. Curley and City Greeter Thomas Johnson. Miss Curley presented her guest with an old-fashioned bouquet of "my father's favorite variety," she explained.

Nestled in old lace and pale blue ostrich feathers, the bouquet contained lilies of the valley, orchids of a rare variety, tulips, roses and gardenias.

"It is lovely," Mrs. Hoover told Miss Curley.

PRESENTED BOUQUETS

Then, too, a bouquet of lily sprays and orchids was presented Mrs. Hoover by her friend, Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers, whom she grasped by the hand affectionately as she stepped from the train.

Mrs. Hoover wore a blue and grey-pin dot silk dress under a wool coat of black and white mixtures trimmed with black Persian lamb collar. A black velvet hat of the prevailing tight-fitting mode topped off an outfit of the ensemble idea. Mrs. Hoover wore black suede shoes and gun-metal chiffon hose.

Three Federal Departments to Investigate Charge of Bakers' Trust
By Theodore G. Joslin
Special to the Transcript:
Washington, Oct. 3—Although world markets are glutted with wheat and the cost of last year has been reduced by 50 per cent, the price of bread in Boston has been increased materially with a new law increasing the weight of a loaf from 12 to 16 ounces, Government survey revealed today.
Investigation of the reasons for maintaining practically the same price for bread while the cost of the commodity has been reduced by almost 50 per cent as compared with a year ago, Government officials in charge of the survey declared.

... there will be talk about reducing bread prices!

On September 27th A&P called attention to the remarkably low price of flour and to the fact that A&P's buyers had foreseen the possibility of such a drop. Acting on the advice of these experts A&P at once—June 2nd—reduced the price of white bread to seven cents.

This advertisement appeared Sept. 27, 1930

Newspapers state that the price of bread in Boston today is 8.8 cents a pound compared with 8.7 cents in September.

A&P's price for white bread today is 5.6 cents a pound—3.2 cents less than the average.

In September, 1929, A&P's price was 6.4 cents a pound—even then 2.4 cents less than today's price.

ARMY AND NAVY PLANES FROLIC OVER CITY

Swooping, dipping, turning and diving, Army and Navy planes staged a demonstration today in connection with the Legion air show such as Boston never has seen.

The feature of the show was a beautifully executed exhibition of the "Lufbury turn" by 18 fast fighting ships of the First Pursuit Group from Selfridge Field, Mich.

At the same time 12 observation-attack planes, five big bombers and five navy seaplanes soared over the city in formation, just as delegates were leaving the conventions of the Legion and American Federation of Labor for lunch.

The demonstration began at 1230, as a salute to President Hoover.

HALF-HOUR OF STUNTS

While delegates, pedestrians and office workers craned their necks to watch, the service planes performed for half an hour.

The Curtiss Hawk and Boeing fighter single place pursuit ships took off from Boston Airport in flights of three, moving out over the harbor in V formation.

This was changed into an echelon in which formation the speedy craft roared over the city.

Headed by Capt. Hoyt's ship, the planes made several swiftly turning circles, and then with a roar that could be heard for miles, dropped into a power dive towards Charles River basin.

DIVE AT FULL SPEED.

Their engines wide open, plane after plane dived from a height of 1500 feet to only 500 feet, to sweep upward in a turn which brought them back in line on an even keel.

In the meantime the observation-attack planes from Mitchel Field were flying in individual formation of three planes each, while off in other sections were the Keystone bombers and Navy seaplanes.

The bombers, commanded by Capt. Frank D. Hackett, and powered with 600 horsepower engines, rumbled slowly over the city.

SKIRMISH FORMATION.

The observation-attack planes took off in formations of four, which they held in their flight over the city, shifting smoothly from time to time into skirmish formation.

The demonstration took the place of the commercial speed race, which was cut off the afternoon program, together with a "mystery" act.

In place of the latter, Sergt. Harold Kramer was to do a parachute jump from an army ship over Charles river basin late this afternoon.

Maj. Ralph Royce, former commander of the First Pursuit group and now attached to the War College, arrived in a Curtiss Falcon from Washington to take part in the show.

PRECEDED BY HURLEY

He was preceded by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, accompanied by C. W. Mason, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma, Gen. Ray Hoffman, U. S. A. retired, and John Porter in an army tri-motored Ford piloted by Lieut. C. W. Causland.

Another arrival was Lieut. Donald W. Fitch of the army air corps, a Melrose boy who flew a pursuit plane from France Field, Panama.

During the army and navy demonstration all commercial flying ceased at the airport.

Police searched through the night, but today asked the scouts to aid.

$3000 in Radium Lost in Ashes Found by Electroscope

Newark, N. J., Oct. 6 (AP)—A $3000 ash can! Radium lost at Beth Israel Hospital was located in ashes by means of an electroscope. Three platinum containers, about as big as a pin, got into a waste basket and went through the hospital incinerator. Chemical treatment will be necessary to recover the radium.

BROADCASTING BY CONGRESS IS URGED

Approving as a "real constructive experiment" the proposed broadcasting of congressional activities in co-operation with the Hearst Radio Service, Congressman John W. McCormack of Boston today urged a trial of innovation.

"The idea is very appealing," he said.

"I can see no objection to an experiment, not a 'noble experiment' but a real constructive experiment and feel that it should be started by broadcasting debates on important measures and at the end of each legislative day have the resume of the proceedings broadcast through the country.

"This would be a good starting point and is of such merit as to justify a fair trial.

"There are practical considerations that cannot be ignored, among which is the interest of the general public.

"It would seem this is the most important and determining factor.

"There are other practical difficulties that would have to be considered but I can see no objection to the experiment."

The move was fostered by the Washington Herald whose editors saw possibility of education of the public in affairs national through medium of the radio.

Link Between China and Aztecs Is Denied

Washington, Oct. 6 (AP)—Any link between ancient Aztec civilization and that of old China and old Egypt today was pronounced "utterly without archaeological foundation" by anthropologists of National Museum. An account of G. Ryden, archaeologist, displaying in Los Angeles 26 newly-unearthed, 2500 B. ARENA SEA OF COLOR AS BODENHAMER OPENS LEGION CONVENTION

DELEGATES ARE WELCOMED BY ALLEN AND CURLEY

The 12th annual convention of the American Legion was officially brought to order amid a sea of color in the Arena, today, by National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer, whose pounding gavel launched a crowded, inspiring program.

The rank and file of delegates filled the central floor space. Distinguished guests circled them in the horseshoe of boxes, and in the surrounding seats and gallery sat thousands of Legionnaires and members of the auxiliary.

The speakers and national officers faced this great crowd from the high stage at the end of the hall, with amplifiers carrying their voices all around the building. microphones sending their words all over the nation, and clicking telegraph instruments distributing word pictures of the whole great assembly to all parts of the globe

GOURAUD IS CHEERED

The hall itself was a gay scene, its walls and roof covered with bunting and streamers. The Legionnaires themselves provided plenty of color with their uniforms.

The first great cheer went up when Gen. Henri Gouraud, "Lion of the Argonne," who sacrificed his right arm in order that he might return sooner to the fighting front, entered the hall and was greeted by Congressman A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester, himself a veteran of the French army.

The crowd bowed in silence as Rev. George C. Kettell, D. D., national chaplain, delivered the invocation.

Then, amid a fanfare of bugles, the colors were advanced to the stage, surrounded by the color guard in charge of Sergeant-at-Arms William Carey, a Massachusetts man, who has had a glittering service career.

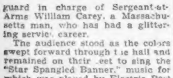
The audience stood as the colors swept forward through the hall and remained on their feet to sing the "Star Spangled Banner," music for which was played by Electric Post band of Milwaukee, 1329 champion American Legion band.

GREETED BY GOVERNOR

Governor Allen and Mayor Curley, escorted by Sergeant-at-Arms Carey, took their places just to the right of the rostrum during this inspiring scene. Next official guest to put in his appearance was Norman S. Case of Rhode Island, a marine corps veteran of overseas service, who was escorted by Roy Worth, commander of Providence post.

The reading of the official call of the convention was waived on motion of a delegate, and the convention received its formal welcome from Gov. Allen, Mayor Curley, John J. Connell, past commander of the Massachusetts department, and Carroll J. Swan, president of the 1930 convention corporation.



OVATION FOR COOLIDGES.

When Mayor Curley in his remarks mentioned the name of Woodrow Wilson, who was commander-in-chief of these Legionnaires during the war days, there was prolonged cheering. It lasted five minutes. Mention of the name of Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, also drew applause. The mayor extolled the illustrious Adams family.

Mayor Curley's tribute to the women and their part in winning the war drew applause lasting five minutes.

The arrival of Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge as Carroll Swan finished speaking was the signal for the biggest ovation accorded up to that time by the Legionnaires.

The former President stepped to the front of the platform and bowed, and the din was terrific.

Mrs. Coolidge attired in brown and carrying a gorgeous bouquet of chrysanthemums, followed him smiling and bowing. It was more than 10 minutes before the ovation quieted and the crowd settled down.

Mayor Curley had been introduced to the gathering following the applause that had followed Governor Allen's welcoming address.

"The man who has contributed as much, if not more, than any other person to the success of this convention," were the words used by the national chieftain in presenting the mayor. The delegates stood to cheer him.

PERSHING APPEARS.

The mayor held a big key to the city in one hand and a cane from an old Lexington elm in the other.

"I am presenting this to a great defender of the Constitution of the United States," he said, as he handed the cane to Commander Bodenhamer.

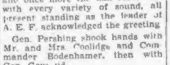
Gen. Gouraud was one of the first to greet Calvin Coolidge when his ovation was over, and the sight of the two men shaking hands and exchanging words of cordial greeting drew another great burst of applause that reeked the building.

Gen. John J. Pershing appeared and once more the hall resounded with every variety of sound, all present standing as the leader of A. E. F. acknowledged the greeting.

Gen. Pershing shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and Commander Bodenhamer, then with Gen. Gouraud.

PERSHING SPEAKS

As Commander Bodenhamer signaled for silence, Pershing stepped forward and spoke to the audience, thanking them for their applause and launching them into a glowing tribute for Gen. Gouraud and all the allied wartime high command are mentioning each by name. As each was mentioned the rafters rang with cheering.



"Boston we are here," he said in closing.

When Mrs. Donald Macrae, the national chief of the auxiliary, was introduced, she delivered a witty address which won the crowd.

A lifer in one of the corps was interspersing all the addresses with discordant notes that had the crowd laughing, and the speakers were taking the interruption in good nature

TRIBUTE TO HOOVERS.

It was as Mrs. Macrae finished her address that President and Mrs. Hoover appeared. They appeared thrilled by the immense, colorful crowd as they stepped forward and bowed.

Their first appearance at the rear of the platform launched the tribute that was to last more than 10 minutes. The crowd stood as a man. They pounded the floor with their feet and canes, they shouted and tossed their hats into the air.

It was only after long efforts that Commander Bodenhamer restored some measure of silence and said, addressing the President:

"The American Legion, every man and woman, is deeply interested in both you and Mrs. Hoover for the compliment you are paying us by attending this convention. We are overjoyed at the rare privilege of entertaining you here today.

CHEERING BEGINS AGAIN

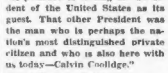
"Only once before has an American Legion convention had the pleasure of having the President of the United States as its guest. That other President was the man who is perhaps the nation's most distinguished private citizen and who is also here with us today—Calvin Coolidge."

Again the cheering started and lasted long after Bodenhamer took their seats. The President sitting beside the national commander and Mrs. Hoover beside the Coolidges.

As the shouting began to die away, Iowa delegates broke into organized cheering for a native son, lending a college football touch to the demonstration scene.

SCHOBEL IMPRESSIVE.

The delegates were considerably impressed by the speech of National Vice-Commander Frank Schobel, Jr., who lost both eyes in action in France. His was an eloquent plea for the Legion to rededicate itself to liberty, justice and democracy. Schobel is from Wyncote, Pa.



Gov. Allen's address also made a distinct impression. He spoke against sectionalism. He viewed the Legion as a great instrument for leveling geographic barriers of sectional prejudice and provincialism. He called it a "league of mutual understanding."

Presidential Chair Is Presented to Auxiliary Head

Mrs. Donald Macrae, National President of the American Legion Auxiliary, is sitting pretty today. Sitting pretty in a brand new chair, presented to her at the convention meeting this morning by the Iowa State Post.

It was a handsome green, upholstered chair, worthy of hand some Mrs. Macrae, who is the leading spirit at the Legion Auxiliary meetings. It will be placed at the National Headquarters and known as the Mrs. Donald Macrae presidential chair.

PROBE OF R-101 DISASTER OPENS

Beauvais, France, Oct. 6—Beauvais police here today declared that at least 43 persons died in the crash and destruction of the British dirigible R-101, near here Sunday morning. Forty-seven bodies were recovered, they said, and one of the original survivors died today.

The police figures do not agree with the figures of the air ministry at London which has insisted that there were only 54 persons aboard, of whom 48 died in the crash, one other died later, and of whom seven are still alive.

From the police figures it would appear that there were 65 persons aboard. Discovery of a woman's shoe with a buckle still attached made it appear possible that this fifty-fifth person was a woman.

Survivors have insisted through out that there were 55 persons aboard.

The French cabinet today officially declared tomorrow a day of mourning.

H. G. Radcliffe, rigger in the crew of the R-101, died today in Beauvais Hospital, leaving but seven survivors.

Astounded and grief-stricken at the disaster which in a moment robbed of the mistress of the air and its finest air talent, the British government dispatched Sir John Salmond, air marshal and chief of staff, to initiate an inquiry and determine circumstances and cause of the disaster.

A joint Anglo-French commission is being formed to conduct the investigation and the French will ask that a British air officer serve as chairman.

Eight tons of rain on an overloaded airship, and leaking gas from many "ballonettes" are believed to have been responsible for the disaster that overtook the R-101 near here shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday.

Hoover and Air Show Give Legion First Day Thrill

By BERT FORD

It sure was a knockout, buddies—the opening day of the greatest national convention ever staged by the American Legion.

There were so many topline features that Boston's neck ached long before dusk, but her heart was bursting with hospitality and joy.

The high light of today's crowded program was the visit of President Hoover and his speech to the Legionnaires.

The thrilling aerial sham battle at noon turned Boston into a stew mill. That was a spectacle that few will ever see eclipsed.

And "The Big Parade" comes to morrow. This all-day attraction will not only be the outstanding feature of the Boston convention but will be the crowning event in the Tercentenary celebrations of Boston and Massachusetts.

HOOVER PLEA FOR PEACE

President Hoover was given an ovation by the Legion delegates and a concourse of spectators that packed the elliptical auditorium. It was a memorable scene. World celebrities crowded the platform.

Speaking not only to the thousands gathered in the Arena, but to the entire civilized world over the radio, President Hoover made a plea for universal peace.

He brought the Legionnaires to their toes with pungent sentences dealing with national policies and ideals. There was prolonged applause, pierced by the shrill "Yankee" of Western delegates when the President said:

"In the great intangibles of human emotion, respect is inseparable from good will. The true spirit of peace requires that we retain a preparedness for defense that is impregnable yet that contains no threat of aggression . . .

"Our national income has expanded to embrace more than one-third of the whole commercial world. As a result, we have become a dominant economic power," he continued.

"We know there is a desire to do justice and not exploitation.

WORLD LOVES ITS FLAGS.

"The day-to-day practical preservation of peace and good will requires that we build up and support agencies for pacific solution of controversies. . . .

"It requires that every American shall realize that men and women of other nations have the same devotion to their flag and are as emotive to the dignity of their country as we are."

The President looked somewhat fatigued. He stood behind a veritable battery of microphones. He read from a manuscript without glasses

Mrs. Hoover, in dark attire, carried a large bouquet. President Hoover became facetious when he said he had shared in war service in a measure and could comprehend the doughboys' French.

Announcement of the names of former President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge electrified the house. The vast audience stood and applauded for many minutes.

Generals Pershing and Gouraud, Governor Allen, Mayor Curley, Col. Carroll J. Swan, president of the American Legion Convention Corp., and others were warmly welcomed.

With the varied uniforms, state banners and flags, the scene was impressive during outbursts of enthusiasm.

Mayor Curley at 4 Gov. Allen were thanked by the convention through the words of Commander Bodenhamer for their financial and moral support.

BOSTON, WE ARE HERE

Gen. Pershing whipped up a whirlwind of applause when he stood at ease for attention and said:

"Boston, we are here!" a twist of his cryptic sayings at the tomb of Lafayette which will ring down through history.

Mrs. Donald Macrae, Jr., national president of the Legion Auxiliary made a hit. She said the Auxiliary's women got a glimpse of the First Lady.

Mrs. Hoover will not attend the Auxiliary convention sessions, having found her time schedule too crowding for her.

She sent her best wishes for a successful meeting in a telegram of regrets. Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers, who is a member of the Auxiliary in Massachusetts, sent a telegram of welcome at the welcoming reception when the Presidential party arrived in Boston today.

The convention gets down to work this morning when a great volume of reports of special committees to act upon.

Action here in the matter of a scholarship to a Bucharest school, offered to an American girl by Princess Ileana of Roumania, past president of the Fidac Auxiliary. The scholarship was accepted by the executive committee at its meeting in Faneuil Hall yesterday morning.

In order to complete their business by Thursday the Auxiliary delegates will convene at 8 o'clock each evening.

Lexington. The mayor was the only one officially to remember and thank the weather man for being so generous with the ideal brand of autumn weather that has prevailed for more than a week.

"A kind Almighty God has given us a sunny day today," said Mayor Curley, "and the grandals for as ideal a day for the parade tomorrow." (Applause.)

The freak parade of the "40 and 8" the burlesque branch of the Legion will take place at 7 this evening and just wait for the drills and concert. That include a genuine French "Poilu" sent from the other side, in which troops and horses were shipped to the front

Legionnaire Saves Man From River

A Legionnaire came to the rescue last night and pulled Patrick J. Shannon, 44, from the waters of the Charles river after he had fallen over the railing along the esplanade at the foot of Dartmouth st.

The Legionnaire is John J. Noll of St. Louis, a member of the Indianapolis delegation to the Legion convention. Noll dove from the railing into the water. Shannon was rushed in the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he was treated.

Meeting of Women Opens With a Procession Led by Mrs. McRae

Amid the pageantry of massed flags and a Pilgrim processional in costumes of 1630, the tenth annual national convention of the American Legion Auxiliary opened today in Symphony Hall.

More than 50,000 women have arrived with the Legionnaires for this great Auxiliary rally and all available space in the hall and balconies was filled long before the opening hour at 8 o'clock this morning.

Boston has seldom seen such a colorful crowd as the gathering of scores of this body, representing the largest organization of duespaying women in the world, with its music and flags its white-clad pages and long procession of distinguished European and American women

WOMEN OPENS WITH PROCESSION

The meeting opened with a procession led by Mrs. Donald Macrae, the national president, accompanied by four pages, Mrs. Millie Hasmer Digourney, Ia.; Miss Henrietta Blackburn, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Dorothy Sutton, Jacksonville, Miss., and Mrs. Clara Cooney of Iowa.

They were followed by the five national vice presidents. Mrs. Vaughn Siebert, Miss Adelaide Pilgrim, Mrs. Lester Thompson, Mrs. J. A. Howell and Mrs. Harr-Vass. They were followed by the distinguished guests of the convocation, escorted by Mrs. William Dehofield, chairman of the guest committee.

Then followed a procession of women in pilgrim costumes singing "America the Beautiful," led by Mrs. Rebecca Crost of Plymouth. The convention was then formally opened with the reading of the call by Mrs. Gwendolyn W. MacDowell national secretary. Several reports were read, including that of Mrs. Macrae.

Four major subjects will be stressed at the convention, child welfare, membership, national unity and rehabilitation. These are the recommendations brought by Mrs. Macrae, the president, in her report to the convention and are in line with the program of the American Legion.

The Auxiliary convention recessed at 10 o'clock to attend the official opening of the Legion convention at the Arena, where President Hoover spoke and where the women got a glimpse of the First Lady.

The Auxiliary convention reconvened at 2 o'clock this afternoon for the reading of the committee reports.

EXTRA POLICE FOR BOSTON

Deputy Superintendent James McDevitt today received confirmation from 25 police department heads throughout the State that more than 100 men had been assigned to do special duty in Boston for the rest of the week during the Legion convention. This is the largest number of outside police details ever brought into Boston.

Chief of State Detectives Thomas F. Riley has assigned 11 regular lieutenants, four sergeants and five special detectives of the State detective department and has offered the Boston police as many more as they desire.

Each town in the Greater Boston district has sent at least one man.

CURLEY LAUDS VETS AS PEACE AGENTS

Characterizes Legion as the Successors to the G. A. R.

A plea for world peace featured the welcoming address of Mayor Curley at the Legion convention today.

He eulogized the Legion, paid tribute to the dead and disabled, and characterized the organization as the successor to the G. A. R., as spiritual leaders through whom may be preserved from war.

The mayor said in part.

"Thirteen years have passed since that day freighted with uncertainty, doubt and fear, that the heart of America responded to the call for the preservation of free government as presented to a waiting world by the hero war President of the United States, the late lamented Woodrow Wilson.

"A waiting world gazed in awe at the spectacle unfolded of a peace-loving nation transformed overnight into a great machine dedicated to the task of providing not only men but food and munitions—and money—and all of the agencies essential to the successful conduct of the mighty drama staged upon the bloodsoaked fields of France and Flanders.

"The glory of the American marine and the citizen soldiery will endure as long as the republic exists.

"The miracle of Congress adopting and the nation accepting, the selective military draft system, and more than 10,000 000 Americans enrolling for service without protest, riot or bloodshed, furnished an example of type of country without its parallel in the world's history.

Sidelights on Legion

Ten happy Legionnaires from Utica, N. Y., hauled up to the Hotel Statler today in a battered and decrepit motorized gun carpal, or "Black Maria." The vehicle was equipped with a wailing siren almost covered with signs bearing snappy slogans, and attracted much attention.

Mayor James H. Curley was met on the City Hall steps today by a delegation from Voiture Locale 2, of the 40 and 8, of Lackawanna, Pa., and presented to him an engraved piece of anthracite coal.

The coal was engraved with the heads of Washington and Lincoln and has a pretty Legion emblem and inscribed with "From the Anthracite Regions to Mayor James M. Curley." The presentation was made by P. L. Magee, who headed the delegation.

The national glee club and quartet contests take place at John Hancock Hall at 8 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. Archie Booker of Bluefield, W. Va., national music chairman. PRESIDENT WARNS OF SCHEMERS TRYING TO UPSET GOVERNMENT

FOES AT HOME WORSE THAN IN TRENCHES

Greatest Service Today Is to Keep Intact That for Which We Fought

Following is the text of the address delivered here today by President Hoover before the American Legion convention.

My Fellow-Countrymen:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I am able to meet here with the American Legion.

I hope I may venture to claim from some years of service during the Great War a measure of comradeship with the men who fought in that war. I understand your variety of French perfectly. I know from intimate experience, and I intend to hide in confidence, the first reaction you had from a passing shell, and the bonnelike appearance of shell holes under certain circumstances.

I shall maintain secret your opinion of those who profess indifference to or the glory in passing bullets or insects, or the mud and filth of the trenches, or cold and weeks in the line and cold.

The glories of war are not in the heartbreaks of passing buddies and the thousand tragedies of the battle line. Its glories do not lie in its surroundings. They lie rather in the spirit, the sacrifices, the devotion of those who go cheerfully and courageously into the trenches, and the ultimate triumph of those lofty ideals for which they gave their all.

SERVICE FOR PEACE

It was inevitable that men who had lived through that great common experience, who had engaged in supreme adventure with death, should combine their efforts of lifelong comradeship.

Yet it was not alone the comradeship of high adventure that instinctively called your organization into being. It was the common understanding which war called forth, the common experience from which proceeded the highest emotions of patriotism that shoulder-to-shoulder companionship in an ideal in which transfigured men's lives.

The millions who shared in that experience came home from it rededicated to the further service of their country. But above all was that service, performed under the stress of the high emotion of war, the service to the great ideals of peace in ofttimes even more difficult and oftentimes requires more sustained courage.

It was, therefore, with deep sympathy that I witnessed the birth of the American Legion in France in 1919.

AFTERMATH OF WAR

At that memorable meeting I sensed this high purpose and expressed those lofty ideals of wartime service in the pledge I ask you to take anew. I will read it again:

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make high the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

That, indeed, is the real pledge to American citizenship.

It is my purpose to speak upon some of these ideals and purposes, for upon them must be translated into cold realism of the day-to-day task of citizenship.

UNREST IS WIDESPREAD

At the moment you made that declaration you sensed an imperative national need. You foresaw that the aftermath of war would be a period of change, a period of disturbed minds, of loosened moorings; a period when evil forces among men might lead to violence and crime; a period which demanded understanding and wise restraint if the basis of all society and all progress were to be maintained.

You realized that liberty and freedom can be won on the battlefield, but they can be held under ordered government in peace. You realized, in fact, that without ordered government the very principles which you had made, the fruition of your high hopes, your endeavors, your courage, might come to naught.

Eleven years of experience in our own country and in every country engaged in that war have proved the need of that inspiration to active citizenship. It has been a period of readjustment, a period of challenge to democratic institutions, a time when the world has had to contend with a greater mood of violence. Even today nearly one-half of the population of our globe is in a state of great unrest or a state of revolution.

Among these ideals was: "To promote peace and good will upon earth." Those indeed were courageous and constructive words at a moment when the guns had barely been silenced and the fires of hate were still burning fiercely.

PLEDGE OF PEACE

They were the words of brave men, of the soldiers from the trenches, men who respected a courageous enemy, who in clear vision saw that the future hope of the world lay in good will, not in hate. It was the real feeling of men who had fought and who knew the dreadfulness of war.

In that statement you gave no glorification to war. It was a pledge to peace based upon freedom and justice, and without this civilization itself must fall. It was a statement neither of pacifism nor militarism.

Real peace in the world requires something more than the documents which we sign to terminate wars. Peace requires unremitting, courageous impulses, lived with sincerity and carried on successfully on a hundred fronts and sustained in the spirit and from the hearts of every individual in every town and village in our country.

In the great intangibles of human emotion, respect is inseparable from good will. The maintenance of respect requires that we sustain a preparedness for defense that is impregnable yet that contains no threat of aggression.

You have maintained that the development of good will also requires the firm establishment of confidence in our sense of international justice. This becomes of double importance from us because of the overpowering strength of our country in its relations with many nations.

WORKING FOR OWN GOOD

We have to remember that during the Great War we demonstrated not only our military power, but also our ability to quickly organize it and the valor to use it. After the war the disturbed condition of the world made it necessary to increase our defense establishment beyond the pre-war basis.

Above all, we made a more rapid recovery from the vast losses of the Great War than other nations in the world. Our national income has expanded to embrace more than one-third of the whole commercial world. As a result we have become a dominant economic power. Our citizens have entered their trade and finance into every corner of the earth.

From these tremendous happenings in our country some believers in other countries came to believe that there were the seeds of the birth of a new imperial power intent upon domination by the destruction of the freedom of other peoples. Such a conception would be the logical deduction from many instances during 3000 years of history when the exploitation of other people has been the outcome of the ability to do so. This is now in no utter misconception of America.

We know there is a desire to do justice and not exploitation. We know there is no financial, traditional or military imperialism in the American heart.

We know, in fact, that we have opened the door of a new social and economic system by which within our own borders we shall create the conquest of poverty without exploiting other nations.

But as wrong as these fears may be, it becomes our first duty to show by our every act, not alone by our Government but by our citizens, that our guide is justice and that confidence may be reposed in that sense of justice.

The day-to-day practical preservation of peace and good will requires that we build up and support agencies for pacific solution of controversies. It requires that no one of us shall entertain suspicion or ill will toward other peoples, that we give them no cause for the most dangerous of all emotions—that is, fear. It requires that every American shall realize that men and women of other nations have the same devotion to their flags and are as sensitive to the dignity of their country as we.

EFFICIENT NAVY ASSURED

On his road to peace we have attained two momentous victories. The first of these is the Kellogg-Briand pact. By the London naval agreement we have silenced the high dangers of competitive naval building and have safeguarded our defense by parity with the greatest naval power in the world.

We have assured the maintenance of an efficient Navy as the first line of defense. By limiting our strength we have given demonstration to the world that we seek no domination but only adequate defense.

The people of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment. The realization of your ideal to promote peace and good will through active citizenship is the greatest guaranty of its continuance.

The first high purpose you express is to uphold and defend the Constitution and to maintain law and order in the United States. Happily your ideal is my first and most sacred duty. As President of the United States I am sworn by the whole people to maintain the Constitution and to enforce the laws. No man could dare call himself a faithful American and suggest otherwise.

You have recognized that the upholding of the Constitution and the enforcement of the laws must, however, not rest upon Government officials alone; it must rise from the stern demand and the loyal co-operation of good citizenship and individual responsibility to the community.

EQUALIZING WAR BURDEN

One of the primary obligations of citizenship is national defense. Our people have traditionally opposed to a large standing army in times of peace. The Nation needs a regular army highly developed in training and technical services, as the nucleus for the training of citizen soldiers and to lead them in times of emergency.

We have always relied on our citizen army, and never relied in vain, but its maintenance is equally an voluntary service of good citizenship. A fair division of much large interest in provision for better industrial mobilization.

You have been greatly interested, and I have lately signed an act creating an inquiry into the methods by which the economic burdens of war shall fall with equal weight upon every element of citizenry. It is not equitable that one citizen shall profit by war while another makes the supreme sacrifice.

One of your expressed ideals was that of "mutual helpfulness." In that solicitude for your comrades dimbled both in war and in peace you have kept that faith. Nor has a grateful Nation failed in its duty.

In addition to hospitalization, rehabilitation, war-risk insurance, adjusted compensation and priority in civil service, the Government has undertaken, through disability allowances, to provide for some 700,000 veterans of the World War. One total outlays on all services to World War veterans are nearing $600,000,000 a year and to veterans of all wars nearly $900,000,000 per annum.

The nation assumes an obligation when it sends its sons to war. The nation is proud to requite this obligation within its full resources. I have been glad of the opportunity to favor the extension of these services in such a manner that they come without question all elements of disablement whether from war or peace.

POWER LIES IN RIGHT

There is, however, a deep responsibility of citizenship in the administration of this fraternity of mutual helpfulness which peculiarly lies upon your members and that is that the demands upon the government should not exceed the measure that justice requires and self help can provide.

If we shall overload the burden of taxation, we shall stagnate our economic progress and we shall by the slumping of its progress place penalties upon every citizen.

There are many other responsibilities of the individual in his "obligations to the community in the 23rd article of your creed. The very beginning of such obligation is at the ballot box. The whole plan of self-government presupposes that the whole people shall participate in the election of its officials, the determination of its policies, and the maintenance of its ideals. Any thing less than this involves government by the minority.

Your own expressed fears of "autocracy of either classes or masses" are but another way of says the individual citizen takes at least his share in the burden of government. He cannot hope to escape tyranny, he may not safely trust that "might will be the master of might," unless he is willing to respond to its rights and duty to go to the ballot box. When he does not insist upon purity of elections he has lost democracy itself.

Beyond this, if right shall be the master of might, every citizen must be on guard against the invasion of our guaranteed liberties even by public officials.

PERILS ALL AROUND US

You have insisted that we shall "safeguard the transmit the principles of democracy." We have seen the erection of many new democracies during this period since the war. We have seen some of them fall by the wayside, some to strong men and some to the mobs.

Strange new doctrines are presented to us in alluring language. Self-government is being questioned. We in America have proved it the surest lift to the common man. We have grown and prospered under it for 150 years. We believe in it.

There is no greater service to the world than that we about hold and strengthen it. It is grounded upon the ideal you have set for yourselves—the obligation of the "individual to the state, the state, and the Nation."

During these years your thousands of posts have concerned themselves with these ideals of citizenship. My purpose today is to urge you to renewed efforts—that you, as the American Legion, as a group of men who, inspired by the ideals of our country, went to battle to preserve those ideals—that you should renew and expand your mission of citizenship.

NEED RESPECT FOR LAW

We need the teaching of the essentials of good-will toward other nations in every community—that the foundations of peace arise from the sense of justice within the citizenry of a nation, in the good-will which they individually evince toward other peoples.

We need the teaching that the foundation of government is respect for law. A millionth interest on the part of the community can be lost in the enforcement of the law, can arouse public opinion, while any condition of lawlessness prevailing unchecked in that community.

You can impress upon the citizens that the road of self-government is through the discharge of our citizen soldiery; actively to participate in these and a multitude of duties of citizenship—all are an inseparable part of the safety and progress of the Nation.

You have a post in every town and every village. These 11,000 posts are organized into divisions with state and national commanders. You are already an army mobilized for unselfish and constructive endeavor. Your strength is made up of men who have stood the quality test of citizenship.

You have it in your power to do much. Through your local posts you can awaken the minds of the communities throughout our nation to a higher ideal of citizenship. You have an exceptional interest and an exceptional opportunity in the front line of citizenship to co-operate and preserve the fundamentals of our Republic.

Hoover Speech Highlights

Highlights of President Hoover's address before the American Legion convention today were:

"The peace of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment."

"Real peace in the world still requires something more than the documents which we sign to terminate wars."

"We know there is no financial, traditional or military imperialism in the American heart."

"One of the primary obligations of citizenship is national defense."

"We need the teaching that the foundation of government is respect for law."

President Hoover Has a Busy Day in Boston

TWO FAIRLY LONG SPEECHES were the big things in the President's visit to Boston. At the Back Bay station an automobile met him, and with Mrs. Hoover, went to the Copley-Plaza. From that time his presence was marked by cheers everywhere he went. First he addressed the Legion convention and then he later addressed the Federation of Labor.

Nation's Obligations to War Veterans Recalled

"Our total outlays on all services to World War veterans are nearly $600,000,000 a year and to veterans of all wars nearly $900,000,000 per annum. The nation assumes an obligation when it sends its sons to war."—From speech by Pres. Hoover before American Legion convention today.

HOOVER TELLS LABOR WAGES HAVE BEEN KEPT TO LEVEL

The text of President Hoover's address before the American Federation of Labor Convention, follows:

Members of the American Federation of Labor:

In his invitation th[e] should address you on this occasion President Green spoke in terms of high praise of the benefits to labor from the nation-wide co-operation initiated at the White House last November for mitigation of the effects of the present depression.

At those White House conferences the leaders of business and industry undertook to do their utmost to maintain the rate of wages. They also undertook in case of shortened employment to distribute work as evenly as possible over their regular body of employes. The leaders of labor undertook to urge efforts in production and to prevent conflict and dispute. The public officials and the managers of industry and utilities undertook to expand construction work to mitigate unemployment.

WAGES MAINTAINED

We have, now had nearly a year in which to note the fulfilling of these arrangements. These, the first undertakings of this character in our history, have been carried on in astonishing degree. There are, of course, exceptions, but in the large sense our great manufacturing companies, the railways, utilities and business houses have been able to maintain the established wages.

Employers have spread their employment systems actually. For the first time in more than a century of these recurring depressions we have been practically free of bitter industrial conflict.

The fine co-operation in the providing of organized emergency employment through Federal, State and municipal public works and utility construction has been an important contribution in lessening the drain of unemployment. The measure of success is clearly demonstrated. The Department of Commerce reports to me that public works and the construction work by the railways and utilities in the last eight months amount to about $4,500,000,000 as compared with about $4,000,000,000 in the same period of the last cycle of waves-de- some to strong men and some to the mobs.

Strange new doctrines are presented to us in alluring language. Self-government is being questioned. We in America have proved it the surest lift to the common man. We have grown and prospered under it for 150 years. We believe in it.

There is no greater service to the world than that we about hold and strengthen it. It is grounded upon the ideal you have set for yourselves—the obligation of the "individual to the state, the state, and the Nation."

During these years your thousands of posts have concerned themselves with these ideals of citizenship. Collector Quits, Defends Accounts

Hubbardston, Oct. 6—Herbert E. Hartford, who resigned his post as tax collector and chairman of the Board of Selectmen Saturday, said today he quit "for the good of the service as they say in the army."

State auditors, who have been working on the books have not notified him of any discrepancy in the accounts, Hartford said.

to our workers than in either England or Germany, no one can contemplate its effect in hardship and discouragement without new resolves to continued exertion and to further effort in solution of our greatest economic problem—stability in employment.

Your chairman has spoken of my interest in the development of an American basis of wages. Both the directors of industry and your leaders have made great progress toward a new and common ground in economic emergencies, which, I am confident, has had a profound effect upon our economic progress during the last few years.

That is the concention that industry must be constantly renovated by scientific research and invention; that labor welcomes these labor-saving devices; that labor gives its full and unrestricted effort to reduce costs by the use of these machines and methods; that the savings from these reduced costs shall be shared between labor, employer, and the consumer. It is a philosophy of mutual interest. It is a practice of co-operation for an advantage that is not only mutual but universal. Labor gains either through increase of wage or reduction of cost of living or shortened hours. Employers gain through increased consumption, and a wider spread distribution of their products, and more stable progress. Consumers gain through lower cost of what they buy. Indeed, mass production must be accompanied by mass consumption through increased purchasing power of wages.

A presentation of this sort does not at once find universal application. Old habit and fear that it is something new in the world's economic life. And there are, of course, those who do not yet believe. It is an far apart as the two poles from the teachings and practices of 100 years ago, who took it for granted that the profitable of the workers could be purchased only at the expense of the employer or some other group in the community, and further that wages could never rise above subsistence or the number of workers could increase so as to pull the worker back into the cesspool of poverty.

READJUSTMENT ERA

If we survey the Nation broadly we shall find that the difficulties of cost economies between wages, profits, and prices has worked out fairly well. In fact, due to competition and the necessity to average profits over the losses of lean years, industry in the national sense is probably today getting the least of the three.

From the accomplishment of this basis of industrial relations I believe America is entering upon a progress toward security, better living, and more hours of leisure than three countries which are seeking to continue old conceptions of the wage and to patch up the old system with doles of various kinds which limit the independence of men. Any consideration of the situation of our labor with the labor of these other countries, whether in times of high prosperity or today in times of temporary depression, should be very convincing to that we are on the right track.

No system is or can be free of difficulties or problems. The rapidity of our inventions and discoveries intensified many problems in adjusting what we nowadays call technological unemployment. I am co-operating with President Green and representatives of employers' associations in an exhaustive inquiry into its various phases.

If we stretch our vision over the last 10 years we shall find much to convince us that the problem is not at all insurmountable in the long run. It is estimated by some of our statisticians that in this period over 2,000,000 workers have been displaced from older industry due to labor-saving devices. Some way or somehow most of these were re-established in new industry and new services.

Now is there any reason to believe that we can not revolve our economic system in such fashion that further new discoveries and inventions will further increase our standard of living and thereby continue to absorb men who are displaced in the older industries.

"That labor gives its full and unrestricted effort to reduce costs by the use of the machines and methods that the savings from these reduced costs shall be shared between labor, employer and consumer."

"Labor gains either through increase of wage or reduction of cost of living or shortened hours."

"No one would invite war or business depression, but from them may come some new inspiration."

Hoover Lauds Labor Ranks

Following are the highlights of President Hoover's address to the American Federation of Labor convention here today:

"The whole body of labor itself deserves much praise for never was its individual efficiency higher than today."

"No system can be free of difficulties or problems."

"Nor is there any reason to believe that we can not revolve our economic system in such fashion that further new discoveries and inventions will further increase our standard of living and thereby continue to absorb men who are displaced in the older industries."

"That labor gives its full and unrestricted effort to reduce costs by the use of the machines and methods; that the savings from these reduced costs shall be shared between labor, employer and consumer."

"Labor gains either through increase of wage or reduction of cost of living or shortened hours."

"No one would invite war or business depression, but from them may come some new inspiration."

Competition Should Not Ruin Industry, Says Hoover

"It certainly is not the purpose of our competitive system that it should produce a competition which destroys stability in all industry and reduces to poverty all those within it."—From President Hoover's speech before American Federation of Labor today.

DESTRUCTIVE COMPETITION

It is this process of readjustment that partly causes our present difficulties in the bituminous coal industry. In that industry the encroachments of electrical power, of natural gas, of improvements in consumption, have speeded to slow down the annual demand from its high peak, leaving a most excessive production capacity. At the same time, the introduction of labor-saving devices has decreased the demand for mine labor. In addition to its other difficulties must be counted the effect of the multitude of 6000 independent mine owners among 7000 mines, which has resulted in destructive competition and final breakdown of wages.

All these conditions have culminated in a demoralization of the industry and a depth of human misery in some sections which is wholly out of place in our American system. The situation has been under investigation of our government departments, by Congress, together with commissions and committees of one sort or another, for the past 10 years. The facts are known.

One key to solution seems to me seems to lie in reduction of this destructive competition. It certainly is not the purpose of our competitive system that it should produce a competition which destroys stability in an industry and reduces to poverty all those within it. Competition is rugged but we maintain that degree of competition which induces progress and protects the consumer. If our regulatory laws be at fault they should be revised.

But most of these problems are problems of stability. With the job secure other questions can be solved with some assurance. You, as workers, know best of all how much a man gains from security in his job. It is the insurance of his manliness, it upholds the personal valuation of himself and of his family.

ABSENCE OF CONFLICT

To establish a system that assures this security is the supreme challenge to statesmen and to representatives of millions of our fellow workers and fellow citizens. The discharge of this responsibility does not allow present difficulties to blind us to our clear vision or the wholesome and courageous aggressive character for which American industry has long been the leader of the world.

The demonstration of nation-wide co-operation and team play and the absence of strife during the depression have increased the stability and wholesomeness of our industrial and social structure. We are justified in feeling that out of it like a new and improved tool has been added to the worthing kit for the solution of our future problems.

No one would prefer either war or business depression, but from them may come some new solutions. We find in these times courage and sympathy, courage intensified many problems in adjusting what we nowadays call technological unemployment. I am co-operating with President Green and representatives of employers' associations in an exhaustive inquiry into its various phases.

If we stretch our vision over the last 10 years we shall find much to convince us that the problem is not at all insurmountable in the long run. It is estimated by some of our statisticians that in this period over 2,000,000 workers have been displaced from older industry due to labor-saving devices. PERSHING HERE WITH 'BOYS'

Gen. John J. Pershing, war-time commander of the A. E. F., came to Boston last night to be with his "boys" again.

As the strains of "Over There" and other war-time favorites floated up from the street below, Gen. Pershing reclined in an easy chair in his suite on the 15th floor of the Ritz-Carlton and told newspapermen that "the American people only partially understand the great achievements of the American Army."

Gen. Pershing smilingly but firmly refused to discuss the war, brushing questions aside with "let us not digress from the convention."

Blind Vet Feared Victim of Theft Plot

Boston police, with the aid of police in every city and town between here and Worcester, are looking for a taxicab which left East Dedham and Washington sts., South End, early today with a blind war veteran and a woman.

According to the information furnished the police, the veteran had $350 on his person.

Sister of Jack London With Auxiliary

Thousands of pounds of prunes and tons of grapes are going to waste on the 1300-acre ranch of the late Jack London, author, at Glen Ellen, Calif., because they will not sell for what it costs to pick them this year.

This is an instance of the "relief" that the federal farm board is giving California growers, London's sister, Mrs. Eliza London Shepard, pointed out upon her arrival in Boston for the convention of the American Legion Auxiliary. Mrs. Shepard was national president of the auxiliary and has also served as its national child welfare chairman. She is staying at the Hotel Somerset.

"If Mrs. London and I did not have an outside income we could not live on what the crops from that big ranch bring," Mrs. Shepard said. "We have the income from the sale of Mr. London's books and royalty from pictures made from them, but the ranch scarcely pays its taxes. I do not know where the American farmer is heading, but it certainly is not toward the much heralded prosperity, at least in our section."

Mrs. Shepard lives on the ranch with Jack London's widow and her biggest thrill in the immediate future will be the housewarming when Mrs. London returns from abroad and Mrs. Shepard gets home from Boston to the new home built of gray stones gathered up on the ranch, she said.

This home is unique not only in architecture but in furnishings. It is a two-story affair with two main rooms, one on each floor and little guest and other rooms leading off them. These rooms contain the treasures Jack London gathered up on his many voyages on the Snark, his boat.

The ship's lights were removed to be hung over the front door under a wide porte cochere.

Indirect lighting effects were secured by inverting the calabashes or food bowls which London brought from the South Sea islands, and in the hall the ship's lanterns shed lights that recall the happy days when the author and his wife cruised in strange waters in search of book material.

Delightful Desserts for the Peach Season

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast over Station WHDH.

NO OTHER fruit, according to some cooks, possesses so many possibilities for delightful desserts as peaches, although if you are fond of apples you may want to make them an exception. When peaches are in season, we need never wonder what to give our families for dessert. You have only to "say it with peaches" in any number of variations and your popularity is assured.

Cinnamon blends well with the flavor of peaches, and a few drops of almond extract or bits of the peach kernels themselves glorify plain peaches into nectar and ambrosia.

A peach betty, favorite of old-time housekeepers, made from alternate layers of sugared peaches, sprinkled with cinnamon and cubes of buttered bread and baked to an entrancing brown is always good. There are some other ways of preparing peaches for desserts, because we haven't much longer to enjoy them, and we'd best take advantage of them while we can.

PEACH SLUMP

Gently stew peaches until tender. Sweeten and add cinnamon. Butter enough rather thick half slices of bread to serve the number of your family. Lay these pieces of bread over the hot stewed peaches. Cover tightly and simmer slowly for three or four minutes, until the bread is well steamed. Lay the half slices on a serving dish and spread the peaches over them. Serve with cream, hard sauce or each portion topped with ice cream. Yum, yum!

PEACH BREAD PUDDING

Toast thoroughly to a delicate brown two large, thick slices of bread. Cover each slice with sweetened slices of peaches and place one on top of the other in a serving bowl. Next, turn one-third cup of milk into which the yolk of an egg has been stirred. Pour over them a boiled custard. Set away for several hours that the bread may become thoroughly saturated. Serve very cold, with or without whipped cream.

IT WAS GOOD TO SIT among a lot of Buddies and watch their reaction to a rollicking film comedy of World War days. Those cuckoos, the Messrs. Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler, went their limit in spreading a barrage of merriment over the comfy seat-trenches at the New B. F. Keith's. The old lady who sat next to us had on her breast a white ribbon labeled "Detroit"; somehow we got an idea she was a gold star mother. Her hearty enjoyment of the show appeared to us to be typical of the special appeal of the program which Messrs. Winston and Conner have dished out for Legionnaire week.

"HALF SHOT AT SUNRISE" could probably be a lot better, but it serves its purpose, if the laughs engendered in the audience were proof of satisfying screen mirth. One could count ever so many states represented in the house; there were overseas Buddies and their kinfolk from foreign parts. Regardless of home address, they were melted into a harmonious crowd of happy theater patrons, finding fun in all the gags and wisecracks of the Messrs. Woolsey and Wheeler, aided by John Rutherford and Robert Warwick have the other important roles.

Mr. Brendel who came out here only a year or so ago can hardly fill all his engagements on the Fox lot so great is his popularity with the directors. THE MARQUIS DE LA FALAISE, known to his good friends in Hollywood as Hank, remains here indefinitely. R. K. O. has given him an excellent place in the foreign department, and what Henri knows about the film market abroad is plenty, having been associated with Pathe in that capacity for several years. At the time Gloria Swanson and the marquis gave out a formal statement announcing their determination to live apart, Henri stated he would return to Paris immediately, but what with foreign versions being so much a part of every studio, he was prevailed upon to remain. His will give advice on all French versions of various pictures also.

THIS MORNING Mary Eaton and Millard Webb are on their way to New York, hurrying to catch the first boat to Europe. DOROTHY MACKAILL TO MAKE 'ONCE A SINNER' NEXT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6—"The Office Wife" has been the greatest thing that ever happened to Dorothy Mackaill in her life. When she left for England she was depressed, worried and she had little faith in her future. Then came "The Office Wife" in which she was a sensation. Warner Brothers cabled her, arranged a new contract and told her to pick her own story.

But even before she makes "Shooting Gallery" which we announced in this column she will go to Fox. Winfield Sheehan, who is turning out some mighty good pictures these days, decided that Miss Mackaill was just the type for the lead in "Once a Sinner" so he borrowed her from Warner Brothers.

Louella O. Parsons

"Once a Sinner" by George Middleton, will be directed by Guthrie McClintock. Joel McCrea, who looks amazingly like John Mackaill and who is certainly popular with the fair sex, has the lead opposite Dorothy. John Halliday and Robert Warwick have the other important roles.

A LITTLE EAVESDROPPING revealed to this writer that John Considine, Jrs first picture for Fox will be a talkie version of "Two Arabian Knights." Just as soon as the little matter of rights is adjusted, production will be started. Howard Hughes of [illegible] fame, produced "Two Arabian Knights" from Caddo in association with John Considine, Jr. It was a tremendous success as the first comedy of the war. El Brendel, who is the chief Fox comedian these days, will play one of the soldiers. Mr. Brendel who came out here only a year or so ago can hardly fill all his engagements on the Fox lot so great is his popularity with the directors. You can easily understand that for no sooner does he appear on the screen that the audience starts laughing in expectation.

THE ADOLPHE MENJOUS were guests at the supper party given by Raoul Walsh following the premiers of "The Big Trail," Kathryn looked particularly well in a new blue evening gown and Adolphe was in good spirits following many compliments given him for his work in "Morocco," which has been previewed again and again. He is particularly enthusiastic over Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's invitation to him to play the lead in "The Great Lover," Leo Dietrichstein's famous play. Remember, I suggested in this column that Adolphe would be the ideal person for the part. He will make it in five languages No wonder he is sought after these days with his ability to speak so many different languages.

IF WE WERE IN a poetic mood this morning we might say something about the silver lining and the long road that has no turning, but we don't happen to feel that way. Yet both quotations are very appropriate in the case of Miss Welch. Niles who used to be one of the most prominent leading men on the screen has had a terrible time trying to come back. Unless an actor is seen constantly on the screen, producers are likely to overlook him, Douglas Fairbanks has engaged Mr. Welch for a part in "Reaching for the Moon."

OUR BEAUTEOUS BILLIE DOVE is headed back to Los Angeles after a delightful summer spent abroad. Billie comes back to take up picture for Howard Hughes and Caddo. Just what the picture will be, no one knows. Mr Hughes has been trying to get something special and until he finds a play suited to Billie's beauty and talents, production will be delayed. The rumor still continues that the youthful millionaire and Miss Dove will be married just as soon as her divorce decree is final. For a long time there seemed to be a question as to whether Mr. Hughes was divorced by the former Mrs. Hughes, who lives in Houston and who is said to be very wealthy in her own right, but now it is said that she has obtained a divorce from her millionaire husband.

VAN SCORES IN KEITH-ALBEE APPEARANCE

The Keith-Albee presents a tip-top show this week. There's a sterling RKO variety bill headed by Gus Van, of Van & Schenck fame, with Charley Howard and his troupe pushing Van hard for headline honors. On screen is a delightful comedy, "She's My Weakness," being a retaliored "Tommy" of stage popularity, with William Collier Sr., Alan Bunce, Helen Ware and Lucian Littlefield at their best. The event marks the twenty-fifth celebration of the Keith-Albee's fifth anniversary.

The team of Van and Schenck is only Van now, death having snatched Joe Schenck suddenly during one of their engagements. Van came to the Keith-Albee direct from the Palace in New York where he started all over again in a single act, presenting a program of character song numbers which he sings in several dialects.

The pint-sized eccentric comedian, Charley Howard with a company of four, brings his newest and by far most hilarious skit which he calls "Hello Miller," an apt and humorous portrayal of what happens to a household when the wife can't be kept away from the sideboard containing the family "spirits."

Other RKO acts especially booked for the anniversary week include the British illusionist and magician, Amac; George and Lily Garden, premier American xylophonists, and a host of popular variety team, Mills and Shea.

A whizzing rumble seat romance is "She's My Weakness." It has Sue Carol and Arthur Lake, but older players are its real stars The story has its locale in a typical American town and hinges around the machinations of a combined politician and matchmaker, who almost ruins Lake's chances to capture the affections of Miss Carol.

The entire show has been staged with special appeal to the Legionnaires.

PRISON DRAMA FEATURE AT SCOLLAY

"Numbered Men", a prison drama, having its first Boston showing at the Scollay, features Conrad Nagel, Bernice Claire, Raymond Hackett, Tully Marshall and Ralph Ince. The camera explores the truth behind prison outbreaks, politics and abuses. The "honor" system is also dealt with. Director Mervyn Le Roy spent several months inspecting San Quentin, Folsom and other famous prisons before filming this version of the famous stage play.

While there are many thrills with a most realistic prison outbreak for a climax, the love story is appealing and sweet, with Miss Claire and Hackett making the best of their opportunities. Mr. Nagel's characterization will probably win him new admirers.

INDIAN FILM AT FENWAY

"The Silent Enemy," now at the Fenway, is a drama of the Ojibway Indians of their native haunts in Northern Ontario, a gripping story of primitive man's battle for existence against the cruel adversities of nature; a thrilling romance of love in the wild spaces of the Indian country

The story of "The Silent Enemy" is the natural unfolding of a tribal story, told simply and replete with exciting wild animal encounters, the play of human emotions, love, jealousy, hatred and vengeance, all portrayed by a primal people, the Indians themselves.

Defeated time and again in their hunting, with long miles of weary travel against odds that make more civilized folk tremble they come through in triumph when the great herd of caribou is found. The migration of the caribou is one of the finest animal ever recorded for the screen. A herd of thousands of horned animals on the rampage is filled with Indian warriors slaying right and left, using the aged weapon of their ancestors, the bow and arrow.

'THE SANTA FE TRAIL' TOPS BILLS

"The Santa Fe Trail," at the Modern and Beacon, is a narrative of a Spanish oasis of love and mystery. The star is Richard Arlen. Eugene Palletta is the comedy man. Those clever children, Mitzi Green and Junior Durkin keep pace with Arlen's romance with Rosita Moreno, Spanish temptress; the kids fascinate up and ride their little hearts out in the van of Indians on the warpath to save their adult friends.

The story tells how a stalwart young sheepman dares to fight overwhelming odds to save his flock and an estate, and of how his friends help him do that; also to win a lovely lady.

On the same program is "Reno." The story concerns the attempts of wealthy Felecia Brett (Ruth Roland) to regain her freedom from a tyrannical husband, for the sake of her five-year-old son. Through the connivance of a spy, the husband is not only able to defeat her efforts, but also frames a situation in which she appears guilty of intimacies with a former sweetheart. When the conspiracy is revealed through disclosures of the husband's mistress, Brett makes a last attempt to frustrate his wife's plans, and thereby furnishes a climax to the drama.

Blind Tenor Soon to Be Heard in Hub Concert

Procession.

BOSTON, OCT. 18, 1789.

As this town is shortly to be honoured with a visit from THE PRESIDENT of the United States in order that we may pay our respects to him, in a manner whereby every inhabitant may see so illustrious and amiable a character, and to prevent the disorder and danger which must ensue from a great assembly of people without order, a Committee appointed by a respectable number of inhabitants, met for the purpose, recommend to their Fellow-Citizens to arrange themselves in the following order, in a

It is also recommended, that the person who shall be chosen as head of each order of Artizans, Tradesmen, Manufacturers, &c. shall be known by displaying a WHITE FLAG, with some device thereon expressive of their several callings, and to be numbered as in the arrangement that follows, which is alphabetically disposed, in order to give general satisfaction.—The Artizans, &c. to display such insignia of their craft, as they can conveniently carry in their hands. JENNEY AERO GASOLINE

no knocks

Here is a motor fuel that is guaranteed not to knock under any conditions.

But this is only one of several satisfaction-giving qualities to be found in

The new JENNEY AERO

This latest addition to the list of Jenney quality products is the result of many months of experimentation spent in seeking to perfect a gasoline that would answer the most rigid requirements of motordom.

The new JENNEY AERO will give greater mileage, more power, and eliminate those carbon troubles.

With confidence we can say that the new JENNEY AERO is supreme among premium-priced gasolines, yet it costs no more.

JUDGE FOR YOURSELF

Give it a fair trial. Do not weaken it with too much of any other gasoline if you wish to enjoy the full benefit of the better performance it is capable of giving. If you find it necessary to mix the "NEW" JENNEY AERO with any other fuel on the first filling, try another tankful undiluted.

Then you will demonstrate, beyond a doubt, why it pays to

Annie Weeps at Losing 'The Kid'

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

"The Edgewater Kid," Colack Leeto's North Side gang, of which Anaiea Annie is membered. Gaddie the Kid was a member, accuses Kinky King, leader of the West Side gang. Kinky swore to get the Kid for taking Annie from him. Later Kinky is found murdered, a gold revolver, similar to that possessed by Goldie, beside him. To satisfy the public's demand for action, the police chief arrests Annie. He refuses Goldie's request for her release. In revenge, Goldie's gang throws the theater district into darkness and destroys public property. Laddie plans to rescue Annie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Chapter 9

POLACK ANNIE could not forget her man. The long hours in the detention cell made her grief no more bitter, but gave her more more time to think. With the blood of her breed, the heritage of generations that that been knouted and herded and ravished and robbed, she was more oriented to feeling than to thinking. But here she was, where she had to think or sleep, and she couldn't sleep.

She was thrown in with other women, in nearby trans-sounding cells, who made the days raucous and the nights hideous. Hopheads, street - walkers, thieves' consorts, a hysterical chambermaid who had strangled her illegitimate baby, a mulatto wench who had badgered a state senator, the female product of the dregs and the drugs and the vices and the thugs of a metropolis

Star Boarder

Anna Daley, the lockup matron, was as sympathetic as might be asked for. A husky, not unhandsome woman, she could be kind and she could be brutal. Her blacksmith arms could enfold or could knock cold. She was a civil service employe, but she knew her politics. Four of her six brothers were coppers, and the other two worked in City Hall. Goldie Gorio was to her a big shot. And Polack Annie was her star boarder.

"There, there, child," she said consolingly as she brought her good-looking Greek-husband her supper, sent for from the outside and paid for from the outside, "it ain't no get you nowheres, cryin' them pretty eyes out. They never convict women for murder; certinly not women with your looks, an' least of all, with the influence you got—so —"

"Oh, it ain't that," sobed Annie. "The rap is baloney. It's the Kid I'm cryin' over. I fell for him after I thought I never could fall for a man that way. An' they got him after I got to love him, an' they got him because I loved him."

The matron slid her brawny arm around the slender girl

"Well, you'll meet him above, in a happier place," she breathed. "Pray an' have faith."

"They didn't even give him a chance to confess—to have a priest," wept Annie. "They shot him the minute from across the street—an' on a Sunday. All on account o' me. An' he was even goin' to marry me, he was that sweet an' square. But we never could let go of each other long enough when we were together that."

Only Happiness

The matron patted her.

"It was the only happiness I ever had. Them few months was heaven. Ever since I was born—for no reason I could ever figger out—I never had no life like other girls. My ol' man was killed blowin' a safe. My ol' lady use to feed me. She was a terrible stew an' half the time she was in the hoose-w an' me an' my three sisters an' one brother pannandied or starved. I grew up on the streets an' in the alleys. Boys an' men was makin a play for me even since I can remember, even when I was in rompers. There's somethin' about red hair, matron that makes man go cookoo.

"Well, bein' exposed the way I was, I don't know why I didn't give in sooner. They say my ol' lady —ne of a pretty good family an' maybe I had a streak from her. s come from Polish dukes or omethin', but she run away with e father, who brought her over tere. I was born in Cleaver st., n' born honest, at that—they was married two weeks then. When I was eight, I was runnin' the pail for beer, an' fightin' Reuns an' bar-tenders to get out again.

"When I was 13, me got a stretch as a habitual. The kids was thrun in an orphan asylum, but I hid out. I hiked to Milwaukee, where I had an uncle I —ought he'd give me protection. He did—great. When I crawled out o' his house one mornin' at four, after I'd brained him with

ONE WOMAN SEIZED BY POLICE

Demonstrator Is Arrested Giving Out Handbills Near Statler Hotel

A "Red" advance against President Hoover turned a pale pink in Boston today when police first arrested a woman hand-bill distributor and then stood around with nothing to do when a publicized meeting on Boston Common failed to have any meeters.

The woman arrested was Anna Brown, 26, of Tremont st., Roxbury, who was taken into custody in Tremont st., near the Statler Hotel, after a number of women had complained to Traffic Officer Linwood Gilman that they had received the handbills.

Miss Brown was arrested by Officer Gilman, charged with passing out circulars without a permit.

The handbill she is alleged to have given called for the unemployed to meet on the Charles st. mall of Boston Common at 11 a. m. to demonstrate "Against Hoover and His Fake Prosperity."

At the bottom of the circular it said

"Demonstrate Monday at 11 a. m. for Unemployment Insurance —The Trade Union Unity League, Boston."

When first word of the meeting was received at police headquarters Deputy Supt. McDevitt assigned six inspectors to Boston Common, and a number of plainclothesmen were sent from the La grange st. station.

At the appointed hour, however, nothing happened on the mall, and the officers had no more to do than watch the passing throngs.

Legionnaire Here With His 3 Mascots

Neal Wood, of Uniontown, Pa., Post 51, A. L., has his three mascots with him. "Bettie," the pure white rabbit, has been to every Legion convention with him, including Paris, San Antonio, Louisville and San Francisco, and to the Democratic national convention in Houston.

His monkey, "Georgette" which he says is named after his wife, has been to three conventions, but the little donkey, "Jimmy," is now seeing his second.

Town Carts Bring 300 Families Water

Swampscott, Arrisdale, turned its street water carts into water tanks to furnish 300 families in the Forest Dale section of the town with water, after residents in that neighborhood had complained to the board of selectmen they had been without water, except expensive spring water, for a week.

The town had shut off the main line a month ago, following failure of a real estate promoter to pay water bills for a pipe line leading to the houses.

Swallows Poison

Angered at being given a scolding by her mother, Bernice Vinelli 20, of 13 Mt. Pleasant st., Somerville, was admitted to the Haymarket Relief Hospital yesterday, after she had taken some poison tablets.

TWO NABBED ON MARKET ROOF

Arrested on the roof of a market on Dudley st., Roxbury, two men were taken to police headquarters today to be viewed by witnesses of the fatal shooting of Patrolman Franklin H. Dwyer in a Dorchester drugstore last April.

One man gave an address in Everett. He has two fingers missing, and police say fingerprints left at the scene of the Dwyer shooting were likewise shy two fingers.

The other man had served a sentence of 35 months in the House of Correction in December, 1927, when he pleaded guilty to assault and battery in connection with the death of a policeman.

The two men were seen by Patrolmen Thomas Barry and John Tobin, patrolling adjoining beats, and with the help of Supt. Dalton Lawless they made the arrests, finding burglar's tools and a .32 revolver on the men, according to the police.

Gold Star Mother Smiles as Her Boy's Buddies Gather

In Flanders Field the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row on row
That mark our place,
And in the sky, the larks still bravely singing fly.

A sad, gray-haired gold star mother, Mrs. Myrton Skelley of Des Moines, Ia., sat among mothers of living sons today at the American Legion auxiliary convention and saw behind the waving flags and beating drums a picture of a boy, 21 years old in the Argonne.

Sea prevented from placing her boy into his last green bed. And one has a peace and contentment in her heart that she says she will carry with her to the end of her life.

She was one of 250 Gold Star mothers who went over to France as Mrs. Coolidge's guests to the city of Washington, where mothers and sons are reaping that last great sleep.

KILLED IN ARGONNE.

"The poppies, like the spilt blood of our boys, were waving in the sunlight," she said. "On either side of the graves were shell holes and battle-torn ground. But over it all was that great, brooding calm, and it was like a last tryst without sons."

Mrs. Skelly's boy, Wayne Skelly, enlisted when he was 18 with the 79th division, regular army. He went over early in 1918, and was killed in the second move in the Argonne. For a week his body lay on the battle field while guns barked over him. But Mrs. Skelly doesn't weep, says she is glad.

KILL ALL SMILES.

"If I had it to do over again and the country needed him, I'd send him away with the same spirit I did before," she said. "His marble cross stands facing the north, in the very direction he fell when he was struck by a German machine gun bullet. To me it is the noblest resting place a soldier could have."

So while other mothers are sailing and waving with pride while their sons step by, Mrs. Skelly lives today. Mrs. Skelly will be smiling, too. Smiling at the picture she has of a sunny battlefield, splashed with crimson poppies, and gay now with the song of winging larks.

CURLEY GREETS JERSEY MAYOR

Leading the Emergency Battalion of the Jersey City police, Mayor Frank Hague of that city called on Mayor Curley at City Hall today.

The battalion, with their blue uniforms, white leggins, white belts and shiny silver helmets, formed in the courtyard in front of City Hall where the Jersey City police band serenaded Mayor Curley with "The Wearing of the Green" and other selections.

Mayor Curley welcomed the delegation with a brief address in which he called on the audience to have faith in America during the period of industrial depression.

He then presented Mayor Hague with a "contil ntal hickory stick and a "key to the city."

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained that an accident or an unusual event has happened that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip. If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Pictures of unusual animal poses are wanted, too. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use in the American.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or an unusual event news tip received, $10 for the next best, $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. TRAINS TO BE LENGTHENED TOMORROW

No Interruption in Rapid Transit Lines, but Buses Will Be Halted

Arrangements to handle the largest crowds in its history tomorrow have been made by the Boston Elevated railway.

Service on the rapid transit lines will be more frequent and the trains will be lengthened. It is expected that the crowds will begin to move about 8 o'clock in the morning and extra service over the entire system will be provided from that time on.

There will be little interruption of Elevated service by the parade. The bus lines operating within the center of the city will be discontinued from about 8 o'clock until after the streets are cleared. The Hart st.-Rowes Wharf bus line will be operated during the usual hours, but the route will be changed to operate between Broadway, Stuart st., South Station and Rowes Wharf.

The car service on the Cambridge-Harvard Bridge line will be discontinued from about 7:30 until late afternoon when all the units have left the formation area at Massachusetts ave. and Beacon st. A temporary service from 7:30 until the clearing of the formation area will be operated between Harvard and the crossover on Massachusetts ave at the Armory in Cambridge.

With the aid of the police, Massachusetts ave. between Massachusetts station and Tremont st. will be kept open as far as practical at all times. It is not expected that there will be any serious interference with the service between Dudley station and Massachusetts station.

The Huntington ave. subway lines, the Ipswich st.-Massachusetts station line, the Tremont st. subway lines and the Washington st. lines will be run on regular routes. It is not believed that the parade will cause any long interruptions to service on these lines.

37 RARE HONOR HEROES GATHER

Thirty-seven of the 84 living possessors of the Congressional Medal of Honor—the highest honor awarded by the United States—gathered at Hotel Commodore, Cambridge, last night.

The assembly was the largest of its kind ever held in the history of the country. While the Legion held its convention in Boston, Kansas, there were 30 holders of his honor.

The thirty-seven were guests of Cambridge and the Cambridge Legion Post No. 4.

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards and Maj.-Gen. William Weigel of Tipperary, Ireland, were present. Gen. Edwards joined the corps in the following terms: "Leaving the United States was "lucky" to have such men as those.

Addresses were made by Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge and John D. Crowley, executive secretary of the 1930 Legion convention corporation.

FINGERPRINTS ARE DENIED

Denial was made today by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman that it had been called to his attention that any superior officer the police department was found to have fingerprints on file in the rogues' gallery.

It was also learned that the officers mentioned have not as yet been fingerprinted for the police, so there has been no check-up made as to whether officers have been fingerprinted before.

It has been reported that some patrolmen have refused to be fingerprinted when it is taken at the quarters for new appointees, but it is understood that no disciplinary action will be taken against them, however if they refuse to obey orders of their superiors in the future they will be dismissed from the force.

Nothing High Hat About Rex, King of Quincy Cats

DON'T LET THESE APPARENTLY docile attitudes affected by Rex fool you. For this unusual cat is anything but "grandmotherly" as the amusing picture on the left might suggest. Rex, the 2-year-old pet of 13-year-old William Keefe of Quincy, is the "Jack Dempsey" of animal land. Rex consented to pose in three pictures, which have been captioned, left to right, as follows: "An Afternoon Out," "The Actor" and "The Jockey."

PICKPOCKETS PREY ON SEVEN

A number of victims of pickpockets reported losses at headquarters yesterday.

Albert Pigott, South Main st., Cohasset, reported that $75 was stolen from him. Nora Walsh of Savin Hill ave., Dorchester, was relieved of her pocketbook, containing $10, while in a store.

Wentworth B. Landers of Lenox st., West Newton, lost $55 and his billfold while in a theater.

Leo Rosetta reported the loss of $76 while attending an uptown theater. Bernard Hamelt of Hamilton st., Everett, reported he was victimized to the extent of $42, and Eva Blender of Grampian way lost $30 and a $65 check while in a store.

Special Officer Benjamin Goodman of the bureau of criminal investigation took one man into custody on suspicion of having stolen from the person.

Texan Hiker Loses Autographed Hat

Edward J. Hickey of San Antonio, Texas, a Legionnaire at Texas Tech, hitchhiked to the convention here only to have his most prized possession stolen last night.

The stolen article was a broad-brimmed felt hat bearing the signatures of 14 state governors, high dignitaries of Canada, and numerous other people.

In the crowd on Washington st. last night some mischievous one snatched the hat and vanished.

Battling Rex Rules Quincy Cat Domain

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare many years ago.

"Everything," purrs Rex, the two-year-old pet cat of William Keefe, 13, of 181 Butler rd., Quincy. And he means it, too, for, as students of Latin will tell you, Rex means King.

And Rex is every inch a king, the ruler of the feline aristocracy of Quincy. He not only keeps the premises about his home inviolate from the profane tread of lesser pussies, but has even been known to successfully combat members of the supposedly more belligerent canine species.

Frequent complaints come from neighbors about vicious and allegedly unwarranted attacks by Rex on their two prize pet dogs.

Rex was given to his master on the latter's 11th birthday by his uncle, Prof. William B. Phelan of Princeton University. Since that time the pair have been inseparable. Rex, like Mary's lamb, even follows his master to school.

Like other members of his species Rex bears a charmed life. He has twice been the victim of hit and run drivers but has recovered.

Rex is a vegetarian, and he likes macaroni and cheese, beets and squash pie. He wears a red sweater, glasses and hat, and smokes a pipe.

When he is all dressed up in his regal attire, sitting in front of the house and monarch of all he surveys, one can almost hear him say, "Where's that dog?"

DE MARTINO COMING HERE

Nulton, commander of the Boston navy yard, Brigadier-General Jessie F. Stevens, adjutant-general of Massachusetts.

Arkansas Post in Tribute to Woman

A beautiful tribute from an American Legion unit to one of the most distinguished of its Legion Auxiliary members was rendered yesterday, when the Little Rock drum corps of Arkansas paraded to Hotel Somerset to serenade Mrs. Ruth McCurry Brown.

When the drum corps, in striking uniforms and led by their drum major, arrived at the hotel, word was sent up to Mrs. Brown. When she appeared she found the drum corps drawn up on the green sward on Commonwealth ave. After a salute to Mrs. Brown the drum corps played their serenade.

Mrs. Brown, a candidate for national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, has an outstanding record in Arkansas in Legion circles. She was a pioneer worker, organizing the auxiliary in that state and organizing child welfare work of the auxiliary. Later she became department president, and during her term a record in membership was established.

10,684 ENROLL AT BOSTON U.

With a total enrollment in its 10 schools and colleges for the first semester of 10,684 students, Boston University has swung into the sixty-third year as a university that is a "city within a city at service of the city."

In announcing registration figures, Daniel L. Marsh, president, reports an increase in interest of subjects pertaining to music, as the youngest B. U. department, the college of music, under direction of Dean John Patten Marshall, shows a definite enrollment of full time students further ahead of any department.

The B. U. College of Business Administration leads again with the highest enrollment of any department, having a record of 3380 students. In the school of education, the enrolment is 2349, second largest. Graduate professional schools average the same number of students as shown by last year's figures, with 493 students in the B U school of law; 126 in the school of medicine; 269 in the school of theology; and 360 in the graduate school.

The most noticeable enrolment shrinkage occurs in the B. U school of religious education and social service. Henry H. Meyer, dean, reports 117 students. Other registrations include: Colleges of Practical Arts and Letters, 844, College of Liberal Arts, 716; college and extension, 560; and summer session, 1347.

SMILE GIRLS, 35 STRONG, HERE

One of the features of tomorrow's parade will be the Smile Girls Band of the Arkansas Legion delegation. None of the Smile Girls is more than 17 years old, and all are members of the best families in the State, according to J. E. Carter of Pine Bluff, chairman of the delegation's exhibit committee.

En route to Boston from Little Rock the band attracted wide attention in parades at Chicago, Detroit and Montreal.

Capt. M. W. Flack, airplane first captain of the British Empire, booked passage on the liner from New York, but missed the steamer and came to Boston to embark.

Boston Tea Party Restaged Tonight

The Boston Tea Party will be restaged at 8.15 tonight, on the Charles River embankment, near the reproduction of the Puritan theater ship Arbella, as part of the American Legion national convention entertainment.

Boston Latin school pupils, in Colonial and Indian costumes, will row out to the Arbella, and there stage the famous tea party once more, dumping tea chests and cartons overboard.

Fireworks will follow, bands will play and plans call for the flying overhead of a baby blimp. A finale will close the affair, with the sounding of "taps" by a bugler, which will be carried in relays throughout the city.

FIFTH BLAZE

For the fifth time in a week firebugs early today set a fire in the rear of Hunt's Fireworks factory in Weymouth—but the only result was the firing of the woods.

Within an hour after the first alarm had sounded the flames had spread to the trees, and it was necessary to call help from South Weymouth.

The latest fire started at 9 a. m. yesterday in the woods off Summer st, and swept toward the lines of high tension wires in South Weymouth.

It was believed under control 12 hours later but early today it broke out again and, for a time the Weymouth Lumber Company yards were threatened.

BUTLER BENEFITS

Even though the President at today's State luncheon, between the conventions, is to make no allusion to Butler's candidacy, it is pointed out, the prestige gained by Butler from being the President's special guest is considered to be of immense political value to him.

Butler, throughout the primary, running on a dry platform, made the point time and again that he stood squarely for the Hoover policies and that his election would mean one more supporter for the administration policies. The prohibitionists who supported his candidacy linked him with the President and the national party platform adopted in 1928, which contained a "dry" plank.

The telegram of the Liberal Civic League takes cognisance of the Butler breakfast episode, by charging that the New Bedford man has already used the invitation "as evidence that you favor his candidacy."

NO MESSAGE SENT

The incident also revives reports that the President had intended to send a message to the recent Republican convention in Symphony Hall endorsing Butler.

The message, however, failed to materialize and it was later reported in political circles that Mr. Hoover would take care of the situation when he made his Boston trip.

Friends of Butler today saw in the breakfast invitation a materialization of the later report.

The communication to the president from the Liberal Civic League, signed by William M. Mitchell, chairman of the executive committee, read:

"Public announcement that you have invited William M. Butler, Republican U. S. senatorial candidate, to be your special breakfast conference guest on train en route from Providence to Boston tomorrow, is necessarily construed here as an overt attempt to influence the Massachusetts senatorial election.

SEES INTERFERENCE

"Butler has already used your invitation as evidence that you sponsor his candidacy. Such sponsorship inevitably exerts pressure on the electorate that constitutes an interference with representative government, which is forbidden to all government officials and employes. The chief executive of the nation should set a sound example to all his appointees in this respect.

"For 300 years this Commonwealth has resented outside dictation in the administration of its political affairs. No President has ever been successful in attempting to influence our people in the selection of senators and representatives in Congress.

"Mr. Coolidge's endorsement of Butler in 1926 failed of its objective. It seems improbable that your own endorsement of Butler in 1930 would accomplish any more favorable results. Dictation from Washington has always brought disaster to the candidate and loss of prestige to the administration.

COMING AS PRESIDENT

"You are coming here tomorrow not as the leader of the Republican party, but as President of all the United States to be the guest of all the people of this Commonwealth regardless of party affiliations.

"You are also to be the special guest of the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor, organizations whose memberships represent the widest divergence of political views. It is sincerely to be hoped that your visit to Boston will not be marred, nor the prestige of your administration impaired, by any mischievous participation in the partisan political affairs of this state."

A checkup of the telegram by League officials resulted in the intelligence from the telegraph company that the message was delivered at the White House before the presidential party started for Boston.

Detroit "Flying Cops" Bring Bid for 1931

Detroit's "Flying Cops" arrived yesterday in the Detroit Times-Fox Theater plane, carrying a message from Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit to the American Legion and National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer inviting the Legion to hold its 1931 meeting in Detroit.

The 29th reunion of the Wright Family Association will be held at the Brockton Fair Grounds on Columbus Day, to be observed Oct. 13. Up to a few years ago the reunion was held on Labor Day, but during the last two years the choice of date has been left with the executive committee.

Senator Nye was expected to arrive in this city this morning for conferences with various political leaders and candidates.

CARNERA IS CHOICE OVER MALONEY

FANNING
with GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Allons, Mes Enfants ↑ Bigger Than Ryan
On to the Garden! ↓ Giant of A. E. F.
Colossa! Carnera Fights Maloney

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS
FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000 MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1930 FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000

What'll It Be, Orchids or Shamrocks?

Bonjour, mes enfants, B'jou, Old Onions of the Legion, who days have been rolling into North and South Stations, just as few short years ago you came holidaying into Gare St. Lazare Gare Mt. Parnasse in that dear Paree. Whither bound? What's n the sports carte du jour this week? Ah, the Big Fight, the big ght between Primo Carnera, the Italian Man Mountain, and Jim faloney, the Boston Harp. Knowing how you used to head for he Cirque Paris, Cirque d'Hiver and Salle Wagram when Alex MacLean, Jimmy Bronson and Jeff Dickson were putting on the hows for the boys there—out of these shows came a young run- Tunney, to become hesvyweight champion of the orld—it's dollars to doughnuts no one is going to be A. W. O when the gong rings for tomorrow's big shindy in the Boston Garden. Allons, mes enfants. On to the Garden!

Seen the Boston Garden, yet buddy? Well you could put the Arque Paris and the Salle Wagram, both of them, inside the Boston Garden and not be able to find them. Sapristi! Mais, Oui! Big, we should say it was. Same size as the perhaps better known Madison Square Garden in New York. Boston Garden had to be big or they never would have been able to get this Tall Tower of Gorgonzolla, Carnera, who lights our M'seu Malonee, into it. Carnera big? No, not big—huge, enormous, monstrous, immense, vast, gigantic, elephantine, Gargantuan, Cyclopean, in short—heh, heh—large, ver-r-ry large.

George Underwood

Why say, this Eytalian gent is so big he would make Paddy Ryan look like one of Singer's Midgets. And Paddy, the giant weight thrower, who still holds the world's hammer throwing record, was the largest man in the A. E. F.

We can still see Paddy ploughing through the mud at Spartansburg in a uniform four sizes too small for him—his woefully, short, shrunken blouse made him look like a "My mother doesn't knee wool soap ad"—puffing and blowing and trying his best to keep up with the gang, trench tools banging against his hindquarters and snorting:

"Ochone! Ochone! The Armee! The Armee! Sure and what did they—had cess to thim—do, but hand me a pick and shovel! Begorrah, I shoulda stayed in the Ould Country. Bedad I've dug more dommed mud in Car-o-lin-y already than there is turf in Traloe. An' who the bloody 'ell is to blame for it all? The Kaiser! Begorrah, Oi'll make that old b'y pay! Wait till I get to Berlin an' I'll wring the old divil's neck!"

Ah Paddy, what a fighter you would have made if they only had got you early enough and taught you to box. It's the man the size of you, the size of you and Shawn the Bullock, who should be in the ring tomorrow night fighting this giant Carnera.

Our Shamus Maloney is no infant, Buddy, no weakling. Shamus stands more than 6 feet in his socks and in September Morn attire tips the beam at more than 200 pounds.

WHAT A MAN!

But this Ambling Alp from Sunny It'. O, what a help to his mommer he'll be when he grows up! Six feet seven inches in his bare tootsies. Scales close to 270 pounds. More beef on the hoof than there is in the Chicago Stockyards. Bed and boots. Not an ounce of superfluous flesh upon him.

Not one of the pot-bellied types generally found among the giants, soft, flabby hunks of belly-like shaking flesh like Ed Dunkhorst. Any of you remember the night at Coney Island old Bob Fitzsimmons stuck his freckled fist hairy wrist deep into the giant Dunkhorst's mid-section? Poor Ed gave a groan like a dying cow, wrapped his rolls of fat around Bob's paw and folded up like a wet dishrag.

This Italian Colossus is a different kind of bird. His stomach is like the corrugated surface of an armored troop train. You can felt him there until the cows come home. He has a chest on him like a balloon, shoulders as wide as a barn door, two oak boughs for arms and a pair of mauls that make Virginia hams look like lollypops.

From the foregoing, Buddy, you can see when Carnera shoves that walking beam of a steamboat left of his, with the maulie the size of a bowler or the end of it, into your features it really is most annoying. Why old deah, it almost makes you lose your temper.

SHAMUS' CHANCE

But whisper it, Buddy, our David Shamus Maloney has a chance to lick this Goliath. Yes, honest to goodness, he has. Hasn't every American boy a chance to become President? You bet he has. And so did Paddy Ryan have a chance to become General Black Jack Pershing.

Aw well, Maloney has a bit better chance than that.

It seems that Carnera, like Achilles of old, has one weak spot.

You remember when Homer smote his blooming lyre and sang about Achilles he told how in the days when Greek met Greek and they said: "If you you think you're a better man than I am, Gungha Dun, why put up your dukes!" instead of "Let's start a restaurant," as they do now, that the famous champion when a baby was dipped in the waters of invulnerability. Achilles's ma, you recollect, so as not to drown her 'ittie tootsy-wootsy, held him by one heel.

That heel was Achilles' sore spot. He had a bunion on it the size of an egg. It was his only vulnerable spot. You could sock him anywhere else and not make him bat an eyelash. But just give him a nice, gentle like kick on the heel and he'd go down for the full 10.

Now they tell us this fellow Carnera's heel is in his jaw.

Get us Steve, get us?

We mean the little ring birdies say that the Leaning Tower of Gorgonzolla can't take a wallop on the whiskers, a belt on the button, or a caress on the chin.

Of course to get up there, Buddy, our Mister Maloney will have to take a stepladder or one of those elevators we used to take with Lizette, or was it Fifi, or Ma'mselle from Armentieres, Parlay-voo, Parlay-voo—up to the top of Eifel Tower.

Over in dear ol Lunnon Young Stribling took a lift and hoisted himself up to within range of Carnera's features and popped him on the beezer. Carnera went down. But he got up. Then Strib thought a runaway tank had hit him!

Bedad, perhaps Shamus Maloney better not hire that stepladder after all.

Sure, and if there is a wake, we'd much prefer sending Eytalian orchids than shamrocks.

Au Revoir, Buddy. See you in the Garden tomorrow night. Allons, mes enfants. Better bring along some posies. Somebody's going to need 'em.

BUDDY ORATES ON M'LEAN

"It's a little old world, after all," remarked a buddy of the 106th as he pulled up a chair and shoved his feet on the boss' desk. "I walked in to the matchmaker's office at Boston Garden this morning," he continued, "and who should I see sitting there in the swivel chair but old Alex MacLean.

"The last time I saw Alex was when he was staging bouts for the A. E. F. at Coblenz on the Rhine. It was under old Alex that the A. E. F. opened up the Salle Wagram and the Palais de Glace in Paris for boxing. I remember Alex's first show at the Salle Wagram. He wasn't content with one ring. He installed two and had two sets of bouts going on all the time.

"After Paris Alex was sent into the Moselle and the Rhine and put on boxing shows for the K. of C. all over that region. He had Danny Dunn, now manager of Johnny Risko, Tommy McFarland, Bis Mackey, Billy Roche, Johnny McAvoy and a lot of the boys well known now helping him. 4 Hocks like old times to drift into the Garden matchmaker's office."

Fore River Wins in State Soccer League

Woburn Civic Club lost its opening home game in state soccer league tilt to Fore River, 2 to 1.

Bobby Flair, former big leaguer, opened scoring after 10 minutes and five minutes later Balantyne, who accepted Taylor's pass, put the visitors two goals in front.

The best goal of the game came from the toe of Martin Travers.

Syracuse Buys Hamilton Tigers

Hamilton, Ont., Oct 6 (AP)—The franchise and players of the Hamilton Tigers of the International Hockey League have been sold to interests in Syracuse, N. Y., it was announced here today. Directors said financial reverses led to the sale. The club having suffered a deficit of $20,000 last season.

"Bo" McMillin in March to Altar

Gallatin, Mo., Oct 6 (AP)—A. N. McMillin, "Bo" of Center College football fame—was a bridegroom today. Mrs. McMillin was until last night Miss Katheryn Gillihan of Gallatin, a former student at the Kansas State Agricultural College, where "Bo" now is head football coach.

Bird Soccer Team Beats Beacon A. C.

Beacon A. C. trailed Bird & Son, 2 goals to 1, in a Boston and District Soccer League tilt at East Walpole.

The home boys played Benson in goal in the first period, but had him at outside-left in the final stanza, where he relieved French and starred by notching both goals.

Southern Methodists Gave Notre Dame a Scare

As was expected the Southern Methodists gave Notre Dame a stubborn battle. The Methodists were on even terms with the Irish until four minutes before the final whistle.

After the Rockne men had found that their running attack did not function they took to the air and pulled the contest out of the fire.

Fordham was on another scoring rampage and finished 71 points out in front of Buffalo, while Holy Cross turned in a 27-0 victory over Providence College the conquerors of Rutgers.

The Army unleashed a whirlwind offense against Furman and completely swamped the South Carolina collegians, but William and Mary offered a stubborn opposition to the Navy, finally taking a 19-6 count.

Evidently Charlie Bowser has given Bowdoin an offense, for the Brunswick team ran up one of its largest scores against Mass. Aggies Sid Foster, a Manchester, Mass., boy, featured for Bowdoin by scoring four touchdowns, two of which were the result of long runs, and his accurate passing was responsible for two others.

Maine had a narrow escape with Rhode Island, but is rapidly becoming accustomed to stern fights from the clan of Keaney, which held the Blue and Blue to one touchdown last year. Eddie Roundy started his second line against Springfield and discovered his error too late, with the result that the gymnasts scored an easy victory over Colby.

The members of the Little Three broke even, Amherst losing to Princeton, Williams winning over Middlebury and Wesleyan being forced to cancel its game with Conn. Aggies because of an epidemic in Middletown.

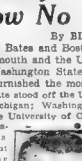
Colgate, Pennsylvania, Cornell and Syracuse won by wide margins as did N. Y. U. and Carnegie Tech, but Columbia failed to score as freely over Union as predicted and Pitt can thank the line-smashing ability of Hood, the fullback, and the squirming, snake dancing Heller for its 16 to 0 victory over West Virginia.

Saturday's Grid Results Show No Local Upsets

By BILL GRIMES

Although Bates and Boston University did themselves proud against Dartmouth and the University of New Hampshire, Michigan State, Washington State, Vanderbilt, Oklahoma Aggies and Gettysburg furnished the most unexpected upsets.

Michigan State stood off the University of Michigan; Washington State upset the University of California; Oklahoma Aggies trounced the team that blew a stare in Walter Camp last season, when a field goal was the tuning point of the game, beating Gettysburg 9 to 7, and Vanderbilt completely outplayed Minnesota.



Bill Grimes

Dartmouth met a tartar in Bates, for the champions of Maine held the Big Green to two legitimate touchdowns. If the Indians underestimated Bates it was not because of any comments from the coaches, all of whom have the greatest respect for Dave Morey as a teacher of football. The Bates game was just the type of contest needed at Dartmouth. The Indians of the North are potentially strong and their inability to function against Bates should instill the drive and fight they must acquire to meet with success in their future games.

Boston University's feat in tieing the University of New Hampshire is a feather in the caps of Head Coach Hilary Mahaney and Al Marsters, for the Wildcats are one of the best drilled of all small college squads.

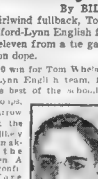
Yale wiped out the sting of last year's 6 to 0 by swamping Maryland and Brown clicked offensively for the first time this season.

Tony Geniawicz Outstanding Schoolboy Football Star

By BILL CONNELL

A whirlwind fullback, Tony Geniawicz, was all over the field in the Medford-Lynn English football game Saturday, and he saved the Lynn eleven from a tie game and a big upset of the schoolboy early season dope.

The 6 to 0 win for Tom Whelan's unbeaten Lynn English team, figured as the best of the schoolboy grid groups, was a narrow one at that. But the game is likely to be the making of the Lynn eleven. A big overconfident before Saturday's clash, Lynn English players had every ounce of possible concelt hammered out of their systems by the wild charge of the Medford fight brigade.



Bill Connell

Comparatively inexperienced and outweighed, the defense of Medford against the offensive flashes of Geniawicz was one of the outstanding events of the weekend games. Medford has come to the fore fast, and will be a mediocre foe for its foes for the rest of the year.

The close battle mentioned above, the Newton-Cambridge Latin tie game, Everett's victory over the heavy Rindge Tech eleven, and Malden's 7 to 6 conquest of Hamilton, were the high lights of Saturday among the school gridiron happenings.

Sid Goldstein, captains an Everett eleven which should be up there all among in the Suburban League scramble. Everett today leads the league with a win and no defeats. Cambridge Latin and Newton are tied for second place while Rindge Tech, Somerville and Brookline make not yet played league title.

At the present time, though, the Suburban League teams appear more evenly matched than at any other time during recent years. Their race for titular honors should give the fans a thousand thrills before the final point is run out and the final grid tattoo of this fall.

Cambridge Latin on Saturday again demonstrated its ability to play great ball against a heavier club and have enough left in the closing minutes of play to outdrive its opponents. Newton, although much heavier than the Cantabs, could not make much headway, and the fleet backfield frontline outcharged the Garden City boys and the Cantab backs came through in the second period. Legge, scored for Swampscott after a 35-yard run on a cut-back play off his own left tackle.

In the final period, Mancuso intercepted a Swampscott pass and ran 55 yards. However, after four tries, his team failed to put the ball over.

Cardinals Conquer

Dorchester Cardinals trounced Milton Town team, 19 to 0, at Cunningham field, Milton.

Molly Adzigian, will o' the wisp running back of Stoneham last year, flashed for the first time this season as his team defeated Saugus. Adzigian took the opening kickoff and fled through the whole Saugus eleven for a touchdown.

Norwood high was tipped over by Woburn in a minor upset. The loss of Capt. Jim Devins of Norwood midway through the fray hurt his eleven.

In his first real test of the year, Waltham came through and ticked off a 6-to-0 win over Somerville. Ted Lewis' Wellesley eleven fought in a 6-all deadlock with Clinton. Brookline defeated Revere, Milton Academy held Thayer Academy to a score-less tie, Dean Academy captured the Holy Cross freshmen and Brockton beat Huntington School in none of the other fine performances of the Saturday tilts.

Not many big games are slated for this week, for most of the big high schools play next Monday. The Boston College high-Boston Latin school fray, at Fenway Park, next Friday afternoon, is the headline school game of this week.

Middlesex School meets Groton on Saturday at Concord in an important private school scrap. Coach Bob Foster of Middlesex will give his boys intensive drills all this week. A win victory over Groton would entitle Middlesex to a lot of attention in private school football circles.

This afternoon the Lexington high second team meets the Acton high first team, at 3 o'clock, at the Lexington Center Playground.

Swampscott in Tie With Winthrop Team

Winthrop and Swampscott played to a 6 to 6 tie in the North Shore Alumni league at General Electric field, Lynn.

Christopher intercepted a forward pass on his 40-yard line and ran 60 yards for a touchdown in the second period. Legge scored for Swampscott after a 35-yard run on a cut-back play off his own left tackle.

PRIMO HAS 67 POUND MARGIN

By JACK CONWAY

Primo Carnera has been installed a 2-to-1 betting choice for his 10-round bout with Jim Maloney, which will be staged at the Boston Garden tomorrow night.

The speculative element is of the opinion that Carnera's tremendous bulk will give him a big advantage over Shamus. It is also pointed out that Primo, in addition to being a Man Mountain, is also as fast as a middleweight.

The betting odds have not dampened the spirit of the Maloney rooters. They point to the fact that Jack Delaney was a 13 to 5 favorite the night he was beaten by Maloney in the New York Garden.

Jack Conway

Maloney has also been particularly successful when battling in Boston rings. Jim displays better combative spirit when performing before a friendly crowd than when he is doing his stuff in out-of-town rings.

The Carnera bout marks a turning point in Maloney's career. If he can conquer the Italian giant, he will be in line for matches with the world's leading heavyweights. He will occupy much the same position he did after he disposed of Delaney.

Just now Maloney is only a Boston and New England ring attraction. He can regain his former position as a national ring figure by halting the long run of victories scored by the gigantic Carnera.

Colorful Crowd to See Battle at Garden

A colorful crowd will jam the Garden to capacity for tomorrow night's bout. Many of the members of the Grotesque Legion will be gathered around the ring. In addition, there will be delegations from the New York and Boston Gardens.

Then there will be Mister Average Fight Fan, who will put his cash for a ticket in the hope of witnessing a slam-bang punching duel. Big fellows always make a strong appeal to the rank and file of the fans.

It is expected that the receipts will go between $90,000 and $100,000. Carnera has been guaranteed $20,000 and also has a privilege of accepting 40 per cent of the receipts. Maloney has a $15,000 guarantee and a 25 per cent privilege.

In the event of a $100,000 gate Carnera will get $40,000 and Maloney $25,000.

Apparently there isn't any depression as far as the earning power of stand out heavyweights is concerned.

Carnera Has Weight Margin of 67 Pounds for Go

Official figures show that Carnera weighs 265 pounds, and Maloney 198 pounds. This gives Primo a handicap of 67 pounds.

Carnera's height is given as six feet seven inches, while that of Maloney is five feet 11¾ inches.

If Carnera were a slow, lumbering fellow Maloney could offset the difference in bulk by his superior speed. Carnera is very fast. He moves around the ring as freely as the average middleweight.

Leon Sec, manager of Carnera says Primo's tremendous size makes it impossible for any of the present crop of heavyweights to defeat him.

Keen judges of boxers who have seen Carnera in action tell me that in addition to being a giant he is also a great fighter. Size backed by ability and courage make Carnera a dangerous ring rival for anybody.

Dorval and Cook in Semifinal

Napoleon Jack Dorval at one time under the management of Jack Kearns and now carrying the Dan Carroll colors, will oppose George Cook of Australia in the semi-final of 10 rounds.

K. O. Phil Kaplan of New York will tackle Jimmy Mendez of New Bedford in another 10.

Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge and Tommy Hanson of Boston will sweep into action — six-round event.

The curtain raiser will find Joey Mack of Quincy and Johnny Delano of East Boston punching it out over the six-round route.

Yost Praises Ban on Momentum in New Grid Rules

SECOND STOP BIG HELP TO GAME

By FIELDING H. YOST

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP)—Momentum and mass momentum have been fought by members of the intercollegiate football rules committee for a third of a century.

The committee's efforts at abolishment culminated this year in a rule that requires all 11 members of a football team come to a stop at least a second after a shift or huddle.

The rule last year read, "approximately a second." But this year the committee decided to say something more. It is: "You must stop AT LEAST a second." Split second watches are recommended to referees to make certain the "at least" is complied with.

A constant agitator for a clear understanding of this important rule, I feel the rules committee finally has reached a fine position. It is one that can be understood anywhere. The clarity will benefit football in the long run.

The phrase, "come to a full stop," appears first in the 1896 rules. In 1905 the general football rules allowed three men in motion.

Rule Changed in Y.-P. Game

Yale and Princeton, in their special agreement on the rules, changed this to read that one man might be in motion when the ball was snapped.

The following year the one man in motion rule became a part of the general rules.

The 1905 rules, general and amended, referred to three men and one man in motion forward the last reminder of the first American rugby rules, in which all 11 men were allowed to be in motion forward.

The 1896 rule virtually is the same as today's, and the committee since that time has been unremitting in an effort to eliminate momentum. It has been especially active during the last 10 years because of the development of shift plays.

Shift plays have two common meanings. The earlier meaning was a shift of personnel. The later meaning, appearing after many plays of the tackle and guards back formations had been eliminated in 1906, refers to a series of rhythm producing steps, the ball being snapped at a moment the players supposedly are stationary.

In reality the power of the rhythm, continued through the moment of passing the ball, producing an 11 man mass momentum play.

Rules Against This Offense

It was against this type of offense the recent enactments of the rules committee have been directed.

Minnesota, in 1909, produced the first of this latter style of shift which came under my observation. The Gophers, in the widely heralded and broadly copied Minnesota shift, always used two hops and sometimes three.

The Minnesota and other similar shifts have been extensively used in the west and south.

Michigan has shifted since. I have known the play of the Wolverines, but its shift, is one of individual variety. It is made extensively as possible to create an unbalanced line at the moment the ball is put in play.

Manifestly it was necessary to make the rule so definite and positive that all teams come to a full stop, losing all momentum, or to change the rules and again permit all teams to be running when the ball is snapped. It is the universal opinion that football is better off for elimination of both momentum and mass.

Fall River Opens Season With Win

Fall River, Oct. 6—Fall River opened its American Soccer League season here with a 2-1 victory over Pawtucket.

The club was on a European tour when the league opened. By yesterday's win it takes first place in the standing.

Fall River led, 2 to 0, at the intermission, goals by Alex McNab and Hugh Coyle. Nilsen made it 2 to 0 early in the second half. Pawtucket came to the front and before the whistle sounded cut the lead to a single goal with markers by McPhail, a former Boston district player, and Burness.

Santos to Battle Hanlon at Salem

Patsy Santos, Revere southpaw, will oppose Johnny Hanlon of Lynn in the feature bout at the Salem A. A. tonight.

Hornlie Vaiha of Gloucester, brother of Billy Nelson of Gloucester in the six-round semifinal, while Jackie Collins of Haverhill meets Speedy Atkinson of Lowell in another six.

Al Vencis of Revere, New England 126-pound amateur champion, will make his bow as pro against Harry Brown of Peabody in another six, and Harry Ferrara of Gloucester clashes with Al Boldig of Salem in the opening six.

WAITING TO POUNCE ON MARINES AS SOON AS THEY LAND

GEORGE COLBERT

THE MARINES ARE HERE. And this Boston College trio is ready and waiting for the invasion and the ensuing battle which takes place at Fenway Park today. The game is being held for the American Legion convention and most of the vets will see another war out on the turf of the ball orchard. Colbert and Antos team up in great forward passing combination that will have to be watched closely by the Marines. Marr, who may not start the game, is one of the hardest running backs on the B. C. squad. He'll see plenty of action. And give the Service champions plenty of bother on the gridiron today.

FOXX BLAMES LOSS ON BREAKS

By JIMMIE FOXX
First Baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Copyright 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

Sportsmans Park, St. Louis, Oct. 6—Who would have thought it? Beaten by Jess Haines who was given little if any thought in the pre-series dope.

But as the situation stands now—tied at two all—I still figure we should be the favorite to win out.

The chief reason is that we have George Earnshaw ready to go into the box tomorrow and he figures to set down the Cards just as he did in the second game of the series.

By my way of figuring, if we win tomorrow, we will be a three to one shot to win the series. But if we lose tomorrow, we still have the advantage that favors a team playing on its home grounds. The series will return to Philadelphia after all.

As for today's game there were any number of plays that might have changed the ultimate result.

If Dykes had socked a good hit in the second, with two on base and two out, it would have probably meant the shutout for Haines. Jess looked very wild and did not appear to have much on the ball but he got better as the game went on. This was important for it was the same Haines who drove in the Cards first run.

If I had done anything but hit into a double play in the third, we might have had a comfortable lead. To strike out would have been better.

If Dykes hadn't made that wild toss in the fourth we would have still been sitting pretty at this stage of the game, but errors of this sort are always excusable. The trouble is that when a player makes an error of this kind, fans are apt to forget the many fine plays he has made.

Foxx Expects A's to Swamp Grimes

The above paragraphs are in no way meant as alibis. They are meant to show that a single play often changes the entire complexion of the game. That was the case today when Dykes made that poor peg, a throw that he would have made perfectly nine times out of ten.

We do not have the winning punch. Grove was good, but Haines was better. That sums up why we lost.

I can't think of any game in the regular season where our hitters were so completely handcuffed.

I cannot adequately explain this. It is true that the gray day was especially favorable to Haines' delivery, but it did not do Grove any harm either.

raspberry from the crowd as they entered the press box because of their alleged Philadelphia leanings.

The gang isn't sore on Ruth it can't be here any more than anywhere else, but they have sworn off the famed announcer. McNamee made no reply to the note directed at him but the Babe, a-seared by what to the crowd and starting autographing baseballs and score cards for the fans who are sitting near him.

In enlarging Sportsman's Park for the series, field boxes were erected in front of the regular players' benches and the athletes of both teams have to sit out in the open like football squads, giving the public its first opportunity ever to watch Connie Mack direct his fielders by waving his score card, urging them on when they are in the field and talking to them when they go out and come in.

When the rival players doffed their caps during the playing of the Star-Spangled Banner, it was discovered that many of them are bald.

If Grimes wins for the Cards today, Manager Street will make no great attempt to capture four games in a row. He will use Sylvester Johnson in the sixth game in Philadelphia and save Hallahan for the seventh game, if one is necessary. If Grimes loses, though, Hallahan will go in Wednesday.

The band played the Stein Song that's the first time it has been rendered in this series, which is much to be thankful for.

They allow women in the press box here. They don't in Philly.

Photographers scampered about, snapping individual players and groups of players from all angles. Newspapermen visited the rival managers in their dugouts before the game and found both quietly confident of victory and both predicting that this may be a long, hard series.

After the game, both clubs will leave for Philadelphia where the series will be resumed on Wednesday. There will be no game tomorrow. The "baseball writers' special," carrying an army of scribes, ghost writers, managers and sports celebrities will depart for Philadelphia at 8 p. m.

The very faint rain ceased but it was dark out there in the infield. It wasn't easy to see dark balls. The clouds hung low and black over the park.

At one o'clock the batting cage was wheeled away and the Cardinals trotted out to their position for fielding practice and a wild burst of cheering. Manager Street batted the ball around the infield and two pitchers batted balls to the outfielders. Every good catch and pickup was cheered by the Cardinal rooters.

Every seat in the place was occupied and hundreds of standees cluttered up the aisles and space back of the last row of grandstand seats. It was evident that the game was a "sell out." Fans stood on boxes and hung from the architecture. Even in the dark recesses of the grandstands.

Betting was reported heavy on today's game and thousands of dollars will change hands. Tom Kearney, nationally known St. Louis betting commissioner, told International News Service he had been laying hundreds of wagers this morning at the following odds: Today's game—Athletics favorites at 7 to 10; Cardinals even money. To win the series—Athletics 7 to 10; Cardinals even money. To win two games in succession—Athletics 3 to 2; Cardinals 2½ to 1.

"There is plenty of St. Louis money," said Kearney. "I never have seen the like of it. There is ten times as much betting as on any other series played in this town. St. Louis and the Middle West is 'sold' on the Cardinals."

Kearney said a Tulsa, Okla., oil man, whose name he could not recall, bet $10,000 on the Red Birds. He declared "Nick the Greek," widely known gambler, dropped between $20,000 and $30,000 on yesterday's game. He said Nick had laid 8 to 5 that Grove would take the Cardinals' measure.

Magoun A. C. Downs Cambridge A. A., 12-6

Magoun A. C. made it two wins in as many starts by defeating Cambridge A. A., 12 to 6, at Richard Trum Field.

Connelly scored the first touch down in the opening period, intercepting a pass on the 10-yard line and went over on the next play. Leahy scored in the second period after running back a kick from the 45 to the one-yard line.

Con O'Kelly Now at the Old Howard

The heavyweight Irish champion, Con O'Kelly, assisted by sparring partners will be the boxing card at the Old Howard beginning today.

B.U. LINEMEN TO GET HARD WORK

Boston University's linemen will be sent through the stiffest workouts they have had this year to prepare for the Dartmouth game at Hanover next Saturday.

Coach Mahaney will devote most of his time this week to bolstering up the line from one end to another so that the Terrier frontwall will make a showing against the Green.

The Terrier coach is far from satisfied with the way his pupils performed in the 12 to 12 tie with New Hampshire last Saturday and there will be plenty of faults corrected this afternoon.

The backs played a great defensive game and did as well as they could offensively, but the line would not open up for them.

The weakness shown against the Wildcats can be traced to the line. The Terriers were expecting an aerial attack from the visitors, but the New Hampshire boys resorted to straight football and ripped consistent gains off tackle and through center.

The Terrier tackles were boxed regularly and they received little help from the ends while the center trio were pushed back time and again.

Center seemed to be the particular weak spot. McCarthy starting at center, played his first game at the pivot position. Howes Lobel and Chamberlain succeeded McCarthy and they did not do any better.

Slowness of Line Hurt Terriers

The main reason for the poor work in the Terrier line can be traced to its slowness. The men did not come out of their holes fast and the visiting linesmen got the jump on the locals regularly.

Coach Mahaney, however, has proven himself to be a good line coach in his five years at Boston University and a much improved Terrier line will be seen in action next Saturday.

It is not expected that there will be any changes in the line, as the starters last Saturday represented the best men on the squad, but if their work does not improve the Terrier mentor will use his sophomore linesmen and develop them for next year.

Near Panic as Cards Defeat Athletics in Fourth Game

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Oct. 6—Jaylon, Saginaw, Detroit, Springfield, Denver, Topeka, Hutchinson, Cincinnati, Tulsa-Kansas City, St. Louis—no, no, this isn't the train caller gargling—it is merely your correspondent reciting the baseball itinerary of Ol' Jess Haines, who yesterday pitched the Cardinals to their second victory over the Philadelphia Athletics and to a tie in the World Series of 1930.

Over the baseball land Ol' Jess has rambled since first he ventured forth from the town of Clayton, Ohio, some 16 years back, picking up scraps of pitching knowledge here and there until he has accumulated quite a store, most of which he bunched together and unloaded on Connie McGillicuddy's American Leaguers in sealing the Cardinals to a 4 to 1 triumph.

Damon Runyon

It has been four years to a day since Ol' Jess now rising thirty-seven years of age, held the New York Yankees to four hits, and a big goose egg in the World Series of 1926, but he was no better on that occasion than he was on the memorable anniversary of this famous feat. He allowed the A's four hits, only one of which was really a clean lick, and not one of which came after the first frame, and most of the time he was making the sluggers from Quakertown strain their back muscles lunging at a slow ball.

As the game ended Ol' Jess' team mates clustered about him and escorted him off the field, hammering his broad shoulders with the calloused palms of their ham-like hands, while a mob that filled Sportsman's Park almost to a panic point, shrieked ecstatically.

The attendance was announced at 39,945, a new record for St. Louis, and the management oversold the standing space until there were nervous squeals from the women jammed into the runways with the excited male baseball bugs.

Overselling of Tickets Caused Near Panic

Just before the game started, the crush on the runway in the lower stand became so terrific that women became frightened, and above the feminine squeals and the growls of the men jammed in that narrow space could be heard cries for the police. There was danger of some of the standees being forced over the railings for a drop of fifty feet onto the hard concrete below. It was the result of overselling the standing room.

If it hadn't been for a bad throw by Jimmy Dykes, the pudgy third baseman of the A's in the fourth frame, the game might have gone into the twilight with Ol' Jess and Lefty Grove, the star side-winder of the Philadelphians, still pumping the ball at the batsmen. In fact, Jimmy will probably be nominated, and unanimously elected as the William G. Goat of this particular game and perhaps he deserves the office.

Two were out in the Cardinal's big side of that fourth, when Blades doubled. Ray Blades knocked an easy bouncer to Dykes, and Dykes' throw to Jimmy Foxx was so wide and low that James had a hard time stopping the ball at all. Foxxey-boy had left second at the crack of the bat, and was right on top of Dykes when the third baseman fired. All Dykes had to do to make the third out, was to hold still and tag the plunging Hafey, who was so far advanced toward third that he could not possibly have regained second.

Customary for Fielder to Make Play at First

But it is customary in such cases for the fielder to make the throw to first as a cinch play, rather than take a chance on missing out on the runner, as Dykes threw Ray Foxx struggled with the ball like hands, while a mob that filled Sportsman's Park almost to a panic point, shrieked ecstatically.

The attendance was announced at 39,945, a new record for St. Louis, and the management oversold the standing space until there were nervous squeals from the women jammed into the runways with the excited male baseball bugs.

Overselling of Tickets Caused Near Panic

Just before the game started, the crush on the runway in the lower stand became so terrific that women became frightened, and above the feminine squeals and the growls of the men jammed in that narrow space could be heard cries for the police. There was danger of some of the standees being forced over the railings for a drop of fifty feet onto the hard concrete below. It was the result of overselling the standing room.

If it hadn't been for a bad throw by Jimmy Dykes, the pudgy third baseman of the A's in the fourth frame, the game might have gone into the twilight with Ol' Jess and Lefty Grove, the star side-winder of the Philadelphians, still pumping the ball at the batsmen. Harvard Is Big Surprise

SECOND TEAM RELIEVES WORRY

By RALPH GILROY
All-American Halfback at Princeton

A ragged offense at times and at other times a smooth running machine enabled the Crimson warriors to bowl over their lighter Vermont and Coast Guard opponents. The Harvard first and second team scores were identical, with the exception that the first stringers accounted for all their goals after touchdowns, whereas the seconds missed up twice, the final scores being 35-0 and 33-0.

The calibre of opposition as put on by the Vermont and Coast Guard eleven was no reason for all even strength to put it might be concluded from strength up the point total that the Crimson regulars were as strong as the varsity.

The Harvard reserves played a strong, aggressive defensive game against the Coast Guard eleven, but offensively they were unable to march consistently down the field against Uncle Sam's boys. The regular starting backfield of Wood, Devens, Batchelder and Schererschewsky worked a whole lot better than the Huzzies around Forbes and Leonard combination. The Devens-to-Wood and the Wood to Devens laterals went for some good gains against the Vermonters. "Red" Record is another fast Crimson backfield performer who picked up a lot of ground on the receiving end of the Harvard lateerals.

Forward Passes Fail to Click

The Crimson forward pass offense was off color Saturday against the Vermonters. Even with Barry Wood doing the throwing not a single pass was completed in the first half of the game. Ogden caught a beauty from Wood in the second half for a 40-yard gain to the Vermont 15-yard line but the was about all in the effort by the Crimson fun-fingers of any consequence.

Forward passes are to be highly ful depend upon eye timing and execution. Fine timing in the pass throwing is necessary. The time to pick out his eligible receiver. Wood had a world of time Saturday in the but cannot complain being afforded no protection in his line and backfield. At times it looked as though Barry took too long getting the passes away, evidently trying for a real distance heave.

But the evident failure of the Crimson wingmen, Harding and Ogden, to elude the Vermont secondary and get into uncrowded position was the factor nullifying success with the aerial weapon.

Harvard tried no passes to her backs. She seemed to depend on long passes to the wings instead of short tosses to the backs. The aimful passing game is just as essential as the long and Harvard will have to put it into his offensive scheme to cope with Army, Dartmouth, Michigan and Yale.

Laterals Worked With Success

The famous Harvard lateral worked in midseason form on five occasions and, when the assignments were carried out precisely, chalked up some long gains. The lateral threat where the first back in the combination fakes to throw but cuts inside the enemy flanks worked better against Vermont and the Coast Guard than the actual pass. A lot of good practice can be gotten out to perfect the pass to be effective against the Crimson's big time opponents.

There was one very noticeable defect in the fundamentals application in the game Saturday. The Harvard tacklers were leaping high for the openers and missing. The bone-jarring and interference work was done mostly by both the first and second stringers. Good tackling is necessary against a first rate offense. Howell will no doubt give his charges a lot of dummy and live tackling this week.

The Harvard line charged hard on the offense and swung out on the interference quite fast. On defense the Crimson tackles, Kales, Richards, Keuhn and Upton got boxed quite a bit. Those tackle positions are going to give the Crimson mentors a lot of worry before the season is over.

Richards, on the basis of Saturday's performance, looks like the best bet. This boy is big, rugged and aggressive. He looked green at his new post on Saturday but seems willing enough to charge in but doesn't seem to know exactly how to go in. "Duke" Dunne will no doubt make a first class tackle of this boy before the season ends. Keuhn looked like the next best bet of the Crimson tackles.

The coaching of the backs in the Harvard line, conceded to be the weak spot at the start of the season, the guards, was taken care of very well by Ogden and Harding. Moushegian, Graves and Reisner also looked good on the extremities.

The best backfield running was contributed by Dennis, Scherer-schewsky, Wood, Batchelder and Record, "Red" Record, star Crimson hurdler may be expected to prove a find to Arnie Horween in the Crimson backfield.

M'CARTHY HAS NOT SIGNED

New York, Oct. 6 (INS).—Col Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, today asked International News Service to publish the following statement:

"I wish to state emphatically that Joe McCarthy, former manager of the Chicago Cubs, has not signed to manage the Yankees, and I want it to be known that if I want to sign McCarthy I will sign him and if I do not want to sign him I won't.

"However, if I do sign him or anyone else, everybody will know about it at the same time."

Ruppert's statement was issued following the publishing of the story that McCarthy had signed by the Yankees.

Description to Last Over Six Hours, From 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. Tomorrow

When the Boston Evening American announcers, Arthur S. Roberts and Newcomb F. Thompson, have concluded their broadcast of the American Legion parade tomorrow they will have established a record for the longest sustained broadcast on record. The broadcast of the parade will begin at 11 o'clock and will not conclude until approximately 5 o'clock. The description will be heard over Station WLEX. The history of radio broadcasting records no broadcast of a single program which has continued for six hours.

The description will be heard over WLEX from the reviewing stand at Tremont st. and will be given in much the same fashion as the preceentenary parade. Word pictures of the different groups as they pass will be presented to the audience who are unable to attend the parade.

Tonight a Legion convention attraction will be presented to radio listeners. From WLEX at 6 15 a number of distinguished guests will speak over the microphone. The National Chaplain Rev Fr. George T Ketterl will open the program. Following him Col. John T. Taylor will speak Also many entertainers will be present at the WLEX Boston Evening American studios, and among them are Gus Van, formerly of the team of Van and Shenck Another group who will be present are the drum and bugle corps of the Memphis Tenn., American Legion Post. This post is the largest in the American Legion, consisting of 46100 members. The group of field musicians consist of 50 men They are under the direction of Bandmaster Theodore Steimetz. The official Ohio department hasn't are still another group who will be heard This organization of 45 musicians are under the direction of C W Whitmyer, and most of the players formed part of the Ohio band delegation that played at the Paris convention in 1927

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

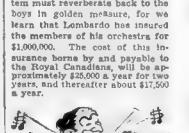
A co-operative investigation of daylight radio broadcasting which has been undertaken by the Arnold Research Service of New York, is expected to reveal much information of value to manufacturers, advertising agencies and broadcasting people concerning this little-understood radio audience; the woman in her home, and her relations to daylight broadcasting; her reaction to various types of programs; her schedule of daily activities; and her manner of listening to radio.

So far there is a great deal uncertainly as to the value of programs broadcast during the daylight hours. The evening audience has been fairly well defined; but the real selling power of daytime programs still remains unknown.

This survey is intended to provide actual current information specifically applicable to each manufacturer's program, group hour, chain hook-up, or independent station, by obtaining exact information as to the hours, programs and stations to which each woman interviewed listened during the 24 hours immediately preceding the interview and including her attitude towards them.

The principal cities in which broadcasting stations are operated will be the basis of this research; and in those cities and their surrounding trade areas, some 60,000 women will be personally interviewed in their homes by field investigators.

The thrills sent through the microphone to the radio audience by Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians over the Columbia System must reverberate back to the boys in golden measure, for we learn that Lombardo has insured the members of his orchestra for $1,000,000. The cost of this insurance borne by and payable to the Royal Canadians, will be approximately $25,000 a year for two years, and thereafter about $17,500 a year.



After hearing about and seeing so many reports concerning incomes of present-day musicians, we're beginning to regret that we didn't learn to play a fiddle instead of a typewriter.

It seems to be the general opinion outside of radio circles, that announcers don't get very soft jobs. You'd be surprised. It is true that they do not have long hours actually on the air, but when they are not before the "mike" they are usually either in a long, tiresome rehearsal, or working doubly hard in an audition for a new radio series which may not be introduced for months.

Quite in keeping with the spirit of this week's celebration in Boston will be the broadcast tonight at 7:30 of Bob "Believe it or not" Ripley, who will have as a guest speaker on the Colonial Network program, station WEEI, Gen. Dan Edwards, who was one of the four pall-bearers at the Unknown Soldier. Gen. Edwards is a well known lecturer, and was one of the most decorated of our men during the war.

Just a word concerning the Musical Moments broadcast over WLEX from the Copley Plaza each week-day morning at 9.00. This is not merely a dance pick-up, as the first half of each program will be devoted to a different type of music Erward W. Hoyle, director, has arranged some very pleasing programs which will be well worth listening to. Saturday night will be devoted entirely to filling requests of the radio audience.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . "One Love," a specialty number, will be sung by Tudor Buckley, baritone, on the Evening in Paris program, heard over WNAC at 9.30 tonight Also heard the latest fashion notes which will be given during the course of the program. . . . One of the treats of the Stromberg-Carlson program heard over WBZA at 10 o'clock tonight will be the playing of Glinka's "Crscevienne," from "A Life for the Czar." . . . The Ingram Shavers resume their fall broadcast tonight at 8.30 over WBZA. Carl Ingram is the musical half of the program will be Mr. Raymond Knight at the keyboard. The orchestra will be under the direction of S. C. Lanin.

Two numbers, neither of which has even been done by them before, will be sung by the Balzo-Rizzi Quartet on the General Motors Family Party program, broadcast over WEEI at 9.30 tonight. The numbers are "Little White Lies" and "Sing Something Simple."

The first of a series of dramatic sketches exclusively for children and mothers, will go on the air over WBZA this afternoon from 5 to 5:30 o'clock. The feature will be known as the Mainline Story hour and will concern the old fable favorites. Today's dramatization will be the "Pied Piper of Hamlin."

RADIO Personalities

The City Council of St. Paul, Minn., made a resolution of commendation to WCCO, Minneapolis, of excellence in musical programs. . . . BEN BERNIE will inaugurate Chicago along with ALL WHITEMAN. Both will be heard over CBS networks. . . . Around the time of year ELLIOT SHAW, NBC baritone, makes very infrequent microphone appearances. He has been singing will be interrupted by guessing as he is a hay fever fan . . . FLOYD GIBBONS is expected to return to the broadcasting as he is to hear. Though "no Smoking" signs prevail at the studios, he holds a lighted coffin nail in his hand and never puffs it. His shirt collar is always unbuttoned and his hat rests at a rakish angle. And he makes faces at the Turn Reached, Woolworth's Sales Show

Parson's Inspiring Facts; Will Stock Exchange Please Do This?

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Oct. 6—This will interest the whole country.

Business reached the turning point in the week beginning Aug. 11, according to Woolworth's sales. Since then each week has been better than the previous week.

President H. T. Parson gave me that heartening information when I asked him if he were doing any considerable buying for distant delivery. He said:

B. C. Forbes

"We have been enjoying lower prices in different stages since last March and we reduced our inventories up to June 1 $9,000,000 compared with a year ago, which put us in a position to take advantage of the new merchandise offered.

"We have been buying continually to replace our stocks and keep them up to standard, and at the present time they are a little higher than usual on account of the expected increase in fall business.

"The decline in sales with us reached its low point in the week ending Aug. 9. Since then we have shown a progressive increase in sales, each week showing better than the previous week, and our September sales, which are only partially in, would indicate we are going to have a very favorable report to make for September and show a very great improvement over August."

Does this suggest that ordinary folks are now acting more commendably than some of those partly responsible for causing the recent terrific declines in commodity prices and stock quotations?

Already large users of wheat who had the courage to buy freely at the bottom have a handsome profit. It is as certain as anything in the future can be that those corporations and individuals who have had the courage to buy contracts at recent low prices for grains, cotton, copper raw sugar, rubber and other commodities that are at less than what it costs to produce will be rewarded in dollars and cents.

J. P. Morgan & Co. it may be recalled, are among the big-hearted investors in the United Corporation, Philadelphia, an organization of far-flung, extremely important ramifications. President John E. Zimmermann, of H. G. I. becoming convinced that the purchase of materials can be made advantageously at this time," has instructed the proper men in the organization to "scrutinize immediately your needs for such construction and operation materials as will require coming the next several months and place your requirements with the purchasing department. Mr. Zimmermann comments.

"Business conditions in this country are essentially sound and I look for a steady and gradual improvement."

General Electric has decided to build a $1,000,000 manufacturing plant at Pittsfield, Mass.

Will other companies exercise similar enterprise? Please speak up.

THE "RED-E-NOT" BEAD STRING SAVES "U" TROUBLE!

This marvelous invention, like most revolutionary ideas is simple. You buy the "RED-E-NOT" bead string already tied in neat knots thus saving "U" the trouble of laboriously tying a knot between each bead after you have strung on the beads. Simple purchase the "RED-E-NOT" bead string from your neighborhood dealer. Comes in many lengths. Be sure to take both inside and outside measurements of your beads so the salesman will know what length string you require. Each knot sold separately if desired. KING Press Distributor.

Feet Demand Great Care as Cooler Weather Comes

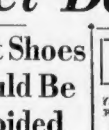
Tight Shoes Should Be Avoided

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

WHEN COOLER weather comes the feet require a lot of care. Many and many a person will have chilblains and painful feet from the beginning of winter till next spring.

Most of these foot ailments are preventable and curable.

Lots of us show little common sense in the way we dress in cool weather. We have a certain date for putting on the "heavy underwear," and another for taking it off, no matter what the temperatures may be during certain months, or wear the same heavy clothing. We may perspire and feel miserably hot but that makes no difference. The calendar says we are in the season of cold weather and that settles it!



Dr. Copeland

Thick, woolen stockings are worn from morning till night. In the warm house or barn these cause the feet to perspire, and in consequence the stockings become moist. The moisture softens the skin and gets it ready to be chilled when the owner of the feet goes out into the cold. Trouble is sure to follow.

To guard against any harm this may come from cold, the first rule is that the blood must flow freely through the surfaces of the body. When you get chilled you beat your arms and legs. Why? Keep to get the blood going in the surfaces.

You can see that tight shoes will prevent free circulation and prepare the way for uncomfortable happenings. These are inevitable if you fail to get the right footgear.

Have the shoes well fitted, but above all else have them big enough. They need not be monstrosities by any means, but buy good shoes and insist on having them properly adjusted. Provide yourself with an extra pair, so if you get wet you can change to a dry pair.

Have stockings of different weights, so you can dress according to the temperature. Take pains not to have the stockings too short, as they are capable of confining the toes, producing corns and ingrown nails.

Wash the feet with thoroughly cold feet, don't scrub over the register or put your feet in the oven. Then rub off your shoes and stockings and place your feet in cold water. Then rub them with a coarse towel.

Answers to Health Queries

ANXIOUS. Q.—Do you think a daily one-mile walk would account for being a few pounds under weight? I am perfectly well otherwise and have never had occasion to see either a doctor or dentist in all my 27 years of life.

A.—No. Walking is healthy and beneficial. The fact that you are a little underweight should not be a cause for concern. You may not be eating enough of the fattening foods.

L. C.: Q.—Why is it that the people of the yellow race, the Chinese especially, have such small feet?

A.—These races are usually of a smaller build and stature and naturally have smaller feet. In the women the fact that the feet have been bound for generations would have some bearing on the fact.

The Woolen Frock Can Be Dressy, Too

By ANN ARDEN

(ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

ITS BEING fashioned for a casual occasion instead of for a candles-and-flowers affair does not hinder the power and glory of the little woolen dress. In its own way, through the mediums of clever brightening touches, it approaches a beauty that the woman of taste can appreciate.

WHEN A costume can be smart on more than one count—then it is indeed a prize! And the costume pictured is complete and appropriate for shopping, luncheon, tea or general trotteur wear, while for colder days in the offing it will rate well under the winter's cloth or fur coat. The bolero and skirt are fashioned of fina black wool, the skirt having groups of pleats center front and back, the bolero very trig and tailored.

THE VEST of emerald green silk has gold nailhead border design, caught with link buttons, and a narrow belt of black patent leather. The blouse is of white silk pique. The tam-o-shanter hat of black felt is edged in black and white ribbon and accented with pom-poms of black and white feathers. The necklace alternates black and white crystals.

DULL BLACK is good fashion in accents; shiny black perhaps just a bit better. It may be that the latter seems more successful because it is self-assertive; at any rate, black patent belts, bands and buttons seem delightfully appropriate with the new styles. Whether it's a daytime or an evening gown, the waistline should be marked by a belt.

BUTTON, BUTTON, who has the button? It might well be fashion, for one sees buttons as a distinguishing detail on many of the new dresses. They add a trim touch to tailored frocks of lingerie weight wool and a note of frivolity to fashions for festive hours.

YOU SCARCELY know whether you are reading a menu or a list of orchard products when you read of the new fall colors. There are lobster red, plum shades, raisin, wine, currant red and others of the same sort. It is to be admitted, however, that the names are vividly descriptive of the colors they designate.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WHDH.

Love Is Like the Solar System

By HELEN ROWLAND.

TRUE COMRADESHIP in marriage is not actually reached, until you have loved each other madly—and then gotten over it sufficiently to LIKE each other sanely.

Woman's freedom did not come in the form of the ballot, but in the form of a pay-envelope.

When a woman can go sweetly to sleep and no longer listen for her husband's key in the latch, nights, it is a sign of either complete faith or complete indifference.

When a woman falls out of love, she lends with a thud; but a man, like a cat, always lands on his feet and walks off—to find another woman who will pet him, make him comfortable, and restore his vanity.

The old-fashioned woman used to give her husband his one "night out" a week; but the husband of a modern woman is lucky if she will give him one night a week at home.

In choosing a husband, it is so hard to find that happy medium between the kind who wants to stay out all night and the kind who wants to tell around the house all day. But any woman who has tried both will prefer the rounder to the hang-around.

Love is like the Solar System. Just as you feel certain you've got it down to an exact science, you make another startling discovery, and have to begin all over again and work it out on a new theory.

The Beauty Parlor is a modern confessional, where women gather together in an involuntary pact for the conquest of men, and confess secrets to the Goddess of the Curling Tongs, which they would not admit to the Lord in prayer.

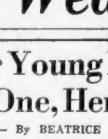
Poor Young Man, Rich Old One, Her Problem

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will discuss a problem of heart and home at 6:35 p. m., over station WLEX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

In the bank where I'm employed, there is a young man three years older than I am, whom I like very much. We are both fond of the out-of-doors, and go canoeing, swimming and play tennis together —but I'm not crazy about him. Have never been crazy about any one, and can't understand the way girls rave about fellows.



Beatrice Fairfax

And say they can't live without them, or will die if they marry some one else.

But my out-of-door friend says he feels that way about me. Meantime, my family are doing all in their power to make me marry an older man, an officer in the bank. He has been married, his wife is dead and he has a daughter almost my age. I like and respect this man, but I don't love him, while I am fully conscious of all the advantages that would accrue to me through marrying him. I've written you this because I want to get it off my chest. You don't mind my coming to you to be "psychoanalyzed," do you?

MARY V.

Dear Mary—At your present state of emotional indifference it would be a great mistake to consider marriage at all. You like the younger man as an agreeable friend interested in the same out-of-door pursuits. Not enough to sign up for life on, my dear girl, in the happiest of marriages calamities must sometimes be faced —sickness, death, losses, disappointment.

If you marry the older man it will be what is vulgarly called "a meal ticket romance" and you're far too intelligent—as your letter, unfortunately, too long to print, shows—not to know that this business of marrying an old man for his money is too often a boomerang that comes back to smite the wife. I hope for your own sake you won't marry anyone till you're actually in love—but, somehow, it's not the gentleman with the grown daughter has a very good chance.

Shall She Make Other Dates?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've always had lots of people with their problems and I know you will be kind enough to help me with mine. I am 20 years old and (no man is 24. I met him two years ago and have gone out with him several times. He lives 25 miles from where I live and can't come down as often, only on Saturdays and Sundays.

I have been asked for dates by other fellows, but won't go out, because I think he wouldn't like it. He is very faithful and hardly ever speaks of love. I think he likes me or else he wouldn't come down so far. Don't you? Should I make dates with others or show him that I care for him and stay home? I thank you for your kind advice. ANXIOUS.

Dear Anxious—If you didn't told me this young man was extremely bashful, I should be inclined to tell you to go ahead and make other "dates." You're not engaged and according to the rules of the game an unengaged girl can make as many dates as she likes. And, as your grandmother would probably tell you, "two strings to your bow" are safer than one. But—sometimes, a shy, sensitive man is terrified by the thought of rivals especially in the beginning, and as your young man has not yet declared himself, better let him think the coast is clear.

He Says He Doesn't Love His Wife

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 20 years old and considered very beautiful, which is the reason, perhaps, that a married man of 36 is in love with me. He says that he doesn't love his wife, that she doesn't understand him or appreciate his finer nature the way I do. He never says anything about getting a divorce, but talks sometimes as if we might be married some day. What makes me suspicious is that once I sat back of them at a movie and they seemed to be very happy. I saw him even hold her hand.

HEARTBROKEN MABEL.

Dear Mabel: You have some reason to feel heartbroken, my dear Mabel, the chief of which is that you have allowed yourself to be misled. Your boy friend has been repeating to you all the rasns old married men's stories.

Has he any finer nature to be appreciated, when he deliberately deceives two—and goodness only knows how many "more—women?" I think if some enterprising person would have rubber stamps made, saying: "I do not love my wife." "She doesn't understand me." "My wife has no appreciation of my finer qualities" and the married boys could stamp and hand them to girls willing to believe it would save a lot of breath.

Revealing the Happy News

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I am to be formally engaged and I wish to have a party to announce it. Will you please give me some details about such a gathering? What form of entertainment shall I give? Would a party of a natural sort be permissible, saying games and so forth?

2. Shall my father announce it at the table, and what shall he say? As I do not wish to have my friends know of it until it is announced, when shall I put on the ring? At the table, or not until they have gone home?

READER.

1. The form of entertainment at which an announcement is made does not essentially differ from the form of party given for any other reason, except that there is the one Big Moment when the announcement is made.

Your announcement party may take the form of a dinner party or a supper party, if it is in the evening. But I judge from your letter that it is to be a dinner party.

I advise you to have the announcement made in as simple and dignified a manner as possible, for this is the best form. If you wish, you may have the one fancy, placed at the place of each guest, to tell the good news. For instance, you may have a white leather or a gold leather cardcase, containing the two visiting cards, at each place. This is, I think, a charming way of making the announcement.

By all means wear your ring at the dinner—at the time when you decide to make the announcement, if you wish to have the announcement indicated by flowers, you can slip it on your finger then, and if you prefer the later announcement, slip it on your finger just before the announcement is made.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.

"Wife Admits Bloody Gown In Attic Box

"Maid, Held as Material Witness, Disappears From Farnsworth Home

"Sensational disclosures in the murder of Alfred A. Farnsworth, millionaire engineer, were made by police today after 24 hours of searching the Farnsworth home, and the grilling of Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth, who is being held on a murder warrant sworn in by Chester Farnsworth, son of the slain man.

"The police announce that they have discovered bloodstained garments hidden in the attic of the Farnsworth home, and that the pretty young widow has admitted they are her own.

"At the same time it was revealed that the maid, Marguerite Spinney, who at first claimed she was with Mrs. Farnsworth when she discovered the body of her husband, has disappeared. The pretty woman was being held as a material witness, but eluded a cordon of police which guarded the house during the night.

Hidden in Attic

"Police officials attach little importance to her disappearance and believe that she will turn up some time today.

"The blood-stained garments, a silk and lace trimmed nightgown and negligee, were found in a locked trunk in a dark attic corner of the Farnsworth home. They were hidden under old newspapers and cast off garments.

"Police declare that an unsuccessful effort had been made to remove the blood stains.

"Confronted with the newly discovered evidence Mrs. Farnsworth broke down and wept. It was many minutes before she was able to speak, and then tearfully admitted that the garments were her own.

"Mrs. Farnsworth, in a statement to Captain of Detectives Cromwell Snider, admitted that she was wearing the expensive nightgown and negligee when she came upon the body of her murdered husband in the darkened bedroom of the family home.

"Groping in the darkness, Mrs. Farnsworth declared, she touched the body and smeared the blood on her garments.

Advice of Maid

"Questioned by the police as to her motive in attempting to remove the stains and hide the garments, the young widow stated that she became wildly excited upon finding her husband's body and acted upon the advice of the escaped maid. Mrs. Spinney, to whom she went for aid immediately after discovering the tragedy.

"Trial of Mrs. Farnsworth will begin on May 6, with Judge Wendell East on the bench."

"The newspaper people are waiting to see you," Fanny Evans, the matron, said. "Hadn't you better comb your hair and wash your face, dearie?"

Cathie looked at her dully.

"Come now, don't you want to get all fixed up nice? They'll want pictures, you know."

"No. Please tell them to go away, Mrs. Evans."

"Now listen. You're a new one, and you don't know about these things. I'm an old timer, here, and I know. These people have to write something, and they will whether you see them or not. If you are nice to them they'll be nicer to you. More sympathetic, do you see."

Silence from Cathie.

"Come now, there's a good girl!" Cathie stood up. You'd never have known her. Four days of confinement in the jail, four days and nights of pitiless questioning, and only broken, fitful sleep, had washed most of her beauty away. She looked like a flower that has been left too long in the rain. Her skin had an unhealthy, transparent pallor, her blue eyes were heavy and red and her hair had lost its golden, shimmering luster. It was pale and dull-looking and tangled. She still wore the black silk dress she had put on that tragic morning. It was mussed and bedraggled. She had not taken advantage of the kindly matron's offer to send for more clothes. What does it matter how you look when you're in jail, and nobody but policemen and lawyers can see you? What does anything matter when you're disgraced?

"Where are they?" she asked. If they had to be seen, she'd see them and have it over with.

"I'd clean up a little if I were you. They'll wait, dearie."

Cathie ran a comb through her tangled curls, accepted Mrs. Evans' offer of powder. Then she went with the matron to the room where they were waiting for her, a dozen or more men, and four or five women.

At first she was too shy to lift her head, and look at them. They began firing questions, a long nosed woman and a tall, shockheaded youth fair in the lead. The others took notes, and asked something just now and then when the long nosed woman and the shock-headed youth paused for breath.

Target for Queries

Well. Cathie was used to questions. She answered everything. The crazy, impertinent questions of the shock-headed youth. Tersely, weighted question of the long nosed woman. The babble of questions from the other men, and the other women. Probably the attorneys, Allen and Gunther, would be angry with her. They were always scolding her for talking too much, or saying the wrong thing. Well, she couldn't help it. Besides it didn't matter . . . nothing mattered any more . . .

"Listen. Why don't you plead guilty?" It was the shock-headed youth who was asking.

"Because I'm not guilty!"

"You'd get a lighter sentence!"

"Why tell her to plead guilty? You listen to me, baby. You stick to your story. Hold out for a jury of men, and you'll be O. K. Don't let 'em put any woman on it—that's all."

Given Advice

"Aw, let her alone! Come on —I've got a deadline if the rest of you haven't—"

A portly woman in a red hat crammed her scribbled notes into a morocco handbag and groaned. "Ten-thirty! And I've got a manicure at 12—I'll never make it. Good heaven, this Farnsworth woman isn't the ONLY thing in life!"

"Come, dearie," the matron said.

Catherine went back to her cell and sat on the edge of the bed. She was still sitting there, heavy-eyed, motionless, when the matron came in again, yawning a bit after a heavy lunch.

"Mrs. Farnsworth — pardon ME! I oughtn't to eat cabbage. It always comes up on me that way! Mrs. Farnsworth, there's another man to see you. Moon, I think the name is—no, it's Moore. Mr. G. Moore, the pass says . . . oh! — it's THAT Moore!"

"Yes. It must be. Oh, I—I don't know what to say. I knew he was coming, but I didn't think it would be today. I can't see him now. Look at me. I didn't know he was coming. Why didn't somebody tell me? I can't see him now, looking like that—oh, no, no—don't send him away. I don't mean that, MRS. EVANS! WAIT!"

Off-Forehead Hair Style

It Brings Problems in Face Charm

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

THE OFF-THE-FOREHEAD mode, both in hair and hat styles, so popular now, brings with it specific beauty problems.

I don't like to seem doubtful, but I have you been massaging your forehead during these summer months? Probably not as much as you should have, I'm not. It was too hot most of the time to even care whether one was beautiful, wasn't it? But, carelessness reaps its toll and so now we must settle down to a little concentrated beauty effort on the forehead.

These things should be observed when you look into the mirror. Is the color of the skin the same as that on the rest of your face? Is the texture as fine and have you any lines?

Josephine Huddleston

Many girls just now are bewailing that sma'l white strip of forehead near the hairline that was left unblemished by the sun's rays because the bathing cap protected it. If this is your trouble, too you'll simply have to bleach the rest of your face whether you had intended to or not, because you can't dress your hair low on the forehead to cover it up, for you simply must push your hair back to make it correspond with the lines of the new fall hats.

A rich, nourishing cream and finger manipulations will correct any line or skin texture difficulties you may have.

Smooth a liberal amount of nourishing cream over the brow and then, placing the tips of the fingers firmly against the skin at the ends of the eyebrows, work them upward to the hairline. The mechanics of this movement are, press the fingers against the skin relax the pressure, slip the fingers up about a quarter of an inch, press, relax, slide the fingers up, press, relax, and continue in this way until you've reached the hairline. Move the fingers over to the center of the forehead and repeat the movement.

Remove the excess cream with cleansing tissues or soft gauze and sponge skin tonic over the forehead. Let it dry.

Country Needs Secretary of Education

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Elsie Robinson

IF YOU'RE really smart and you want to get the breaks in this country you'll endeavor to be born a Belgian hare, or an orchid or over conditions of labor and agriculture, a cherry tree or even a chunk of coal — but never, never, a common American kid. Take over articles of commerce like Federal Government extends benevolent protection. But to the youngsters, God help 'em, it leaves to the mercy of the individual States.

And the mercy of the individual States is a mighty chancy matter. Some State governments value education. Their schools have pride. Others, in the grip of ignorant officials and greedy exploiters of child labor, ignore or actually fight efforts to advance education.

As a consequence we have areas in America—areas which embrace many States—of shameful illiteracy. Once the world referred with contempt to "darkest Africa." Now, behind our complacent back, other nations refer to darkest America, for our illiteracy has become a byword and scandal.

We have thousands, unnumbered thousands, of white children who can neither read, nor write "figger" because there is no law to compel them to go to school—and no school to go to. We exclaim with horror at the hordes of waif children in Russia but we have armies of children in our own country who wander from one work camp to another, hardly seeing a book during the space of their childhood. And from this festering ignorance springs crime and degeneracy, shiftlessness and despair.

This condition doesn't "just happen." There is an obvious cause for it—an equally obvious cure. It exists because we have no centralized control over our children or their education . . . No Department of Education with a Secretary of Education in the President's Cabinet. We have various, vague committees and bureaus which fumble around with feeble educational suggestions to the states, but we have no consolidated department back of our schools such as we have back of agriculture, commerce and labor.

For years such a department has been fought on the ground that it violates the state's "sovereign right" to regulate its own schools, which is guaranteed by the Constitution.

But the state's sovereign right to regulate its own onions, long horns and work gangs is also guaranteed by the Constitution. Yet if a state is wrestling with peach blight, trying to export tubercular cattle or jam its workers, Uncle's action at Washington, quickly, is plenty.

Is a peach blight more costly than the blight of illiteracy? Are tubercular cattle more deadly than darkened minds? If a government can conserve its forests, why can't it conserve its children?

With the reopening of Congress, the Capper-Robison bill will come up again. This bill provides for a department of education with a Secretary of Education in the President's Cabinet . . . authorizes funds to enable the new department to conduct research and distribute the information thus obtained to the several states . . . establish a departmental conference on education, to be made up of representatives from each of the executive departments . . . creates a national council of education to advise the chief school officers of the States and territories.

Above all, Uncle Sam's Big Stick of authority behind that most shamefully neglected of institutions—The Child provides for a department of education with a Secretary of Education in the President's Cabinet.

Sounds fine, doesn't it? And perhaps you think it will go through without a scrap? Don't fool yourself! Hundreds of stupid stick-in-the-muds, complacent fathheads and greedy exploiters of youth will fight like tigers their vicious limit.

As they fought the Child Labor bill which would have lifted our babies from slavery. As they fought the Sheppard-Towner act to protect motherhood. As they fight all progress and decency. If you don't want them to win in that fight, get busy!

Beauty Box

KEEP SHAMPOO liquid on tap, ready for use. Place a cupful of soap in a quart glass mason jar, cover with hot water and let stand. Continue to add hot water as the solution is used. Occasionally add more soap. The basic soap is a necessary part of a shampoo equipment.

NO MATTER how popular the hand-painted complexion may be, or how many millions of rouge compacts are sold a year, it remains a fact that beautiful natural beauty has always had its day in the factory product. They are the rewards of hygienic habits, a digestion that doesn't get balky, proper rest, regular exercise, mental health and the habit of pumping many cubic feet of vitalizing ozone into the lungs to purify and exhilarate the blood streams, &c.

a chair as soon as I come to an' found enough stren'th again, I 'knew iffs' if you know what I mean."

"I—I know what you mean, honey . . . that's sad; that's turrible."

"Well, I didn't have much at no time, an' now I didn't even have nothing' to work at. I met a Great Lakes crainboat captain, an' he gimme a place to sleep an' something to eat, an' at least he was good to me. I sailed the lakes for almost a year, an' then he got drunk an' got outa' at least a wo stevedore whose name I didn' even know, an' he left me flat in Buffilo.

Tough Outfit

"I hitch-hiked my way back, okay excep' in Sandusky, Ohio, where they vagged me an' chucked me in the hands of the Children's S'ciety. An', say, that outfit is tougher than a den o' lions. They preached at me, lit into me, fed me tracts an' sour beans, an' got me decent work on a farm. Oh, it was plenty decent. The farmer, an' the hired man an' the farmer's son—an 'even the village preacher —they all took a special int'rest in me. I took it on the chin. Back to Clever street for me. If I have to go crooked, I at least wanna be where there's movies an' there's things to wake you out o' your sleep excep' crickets an' voices.

"By the time I got back, my brother, Pete, had been engaged as chief o' the orphanage an' was livin with a peny-ante labor slugger who was ambitious to get into the beer racket. He set one eye on me, an' twenty minutes later I went out through a window an' didn' even stop to open it. He called me all over the town an' told me if I didn' listen to reason he'd croak my brother. Well, that lasted till he joined Kinky King's gang. To show he was a bigger, he flashed in front o' Kinky.

"Kinky had a grand eye for that kind o' flashes. He took me 'side 'eman friend with his hand aroun' his Adam's apple, an' says, 'What's a bujok punk like you doin' with a redhead like that?' My sweetheart says, 'Boss, that's my woman.' Kinky looks at him, then spits, then laughs, then growls. 'She is like h—ll,' he says. 'In this gang everything belongs to Kinky . . . go out an' walk down to City Hall . . . keep your eye on it . . . if City Hall caves in, I have to know it' . . . while we had time. Goldie didn't say a lot, but he had the angle right, o' course. He'd jus' made some chump agreement that his mob an' Kinky's wouldn't rod nor rat so long as the boys staid on the reservations. But 'they hadn' make no deal about the girls. That was a new twist—an' I was that twist.

"Ev'ry minute my Kid was with me was velvet. I cried myself blind whenever he left my sight. I shuddered at ev'ry noise. I counted the licks of the clock. My heart beat the seconds an' ev'ry beat was a jolt. Goldie was swell about it. He said Kinky didn't have the gizzard to croak one o' his boys. I knew better. That swill what Kinky was, would make a rabbit fight a tiger, an' Kinky was no rabbit.

Right to Cry

"Sat'dy night was our night in, mostly, the Kid an' me. This p'tie'lar Sat'dy night was—well, it was what the end o' the world oughta be. An' it was all o' that . . . . . he let' me Sund'y mornin' to go to mass. He had to see Goldie after that. He said he'd be home for supper. I had beer on the ice—the cold ham trimmed up with lettuce leaves an' the p'tato's boilin', watchin' over 'em to get 'em jus' the way he loved 'em . . . I was smilin'—he learned me how to worry an' smile at the same time, an' then—

"Well, you read the papers! "Sc you wanna tell me not to cry.

"I got a right to cry—I earned it—all the chiefs in the world couldn't squeeze a tear out o' me, it ain't cryin' becus I'm pupped, or becus I'm scared or becus I'm sore. What the hell do I care whnt they do to me? They can't bring back my Kid, so he won't come home an' miss me. An' if he sin't there what do I care where I am? But I can cry. An' if I wanna cry, don't you stop me. Get me?"

"Sure," said the matron. "I'll cry with you."

Wins the Kid

"I made him take me to the Hall almos' ev'ry night after that. The Kid never missed once. At last I got Kinky so plastered I that he passed out. I officed the Kid. We didn' say much—we didn't need to. He putz me in his car an' he took me to his flat.

"Nobody saw us leave—much. You know how a mob crawl to a noise like Kinky King. By the time the fiftieth heel was givin' him the lowdown he wasn' only burnin' up becus I run out on him—Kinky King—got beers! I tossed him for one o' Goldie's gang—him, Kinky King—but he— me I be a flock o' guns in my fist so they could tip him off—him, Kinky King!

"I knew what it meant. The kid tried to make me think it was all nice. I knew better. But I was hooked an' no was he, an' in our hearts we knew we'd better do our lovin' while we had time. Goldie didn't say a lot, but he had the angle right, o' course. He'd jus' made some chump agreement that his mob an' Kinky's wouldn't rod nor rat so long as the boys staid on the reservations. Welcome, Buddies! In Your Hands Lies Power to Preserve America a Free and Defended Nation

WELCOME, BUDDIES.

From Belleau Woods, or Armentieres for that matter, to the winding old streets of historic Boston is only a span of 12 years.

But what changes you have seen!

A nation gone "dry," in theory if not in fact. They were afraid you'd go on a bust when you got back and rip the country inside out.

Three national elections. From "Keep cool with Coolidge" to "Get hot with Hoover."

Up the ladder of prosperity to the highest rung. With folks looking for extension ladders, to reach the sky. Wild speculation. Then kerflop. Now starting all over again. People buying, to revive prosperity themselves, and wondering when the "leaders" will wake up and take hold of the reins.

The greatest army the world ever knew, your army, now reduced to a corporal's guard, armed with fountain pens.

They told you much about the world being in your debt, like they told you your jobs would be waiting for you. True enough, but the world doesn't want to pay any debts. Instead of love and affection, the crop was envy and jealousy. We see trade routes scuttled, tariff barriers erected by both sides and still hear the cry of "Uncle Shylock" ringing in the air.

Twelve years ago it was intense nationalism. Now it is the seductive philosophy of the triple entente—insane radicalism, inane pacifism and inept internationalism.

They talk of permanent and eternal peace, as if it were to be picked off the nearest tree like a Gravenstein in the fall. And they ask YOU to believe it—forgetting you were the ones that went over there, saw it all and know most about it.

However, heads up, buddies. It's a great country, after all. And we're going to have a whale of a time this week, with the best that good old Boston can afford, which is the least that you deserve.

The American Legion was organized with a nucleus of 25 men at its first caucus at the Club Interallieo on February 16, 1919.

As it assembles here in Boston today for its 12th annual convention it has 11,000 posts with a membership of nearly 900,000 veterans of the World War.

Measured by the good it has achieved for benefit of those who bear the scars and wounds of the war, in preserving the memories of those whose lives were yielded to their country and in ministering to the dependents of the dead as well as to the just requirements of all their comrades summoned to the colors, it is well worthy of double that membership.

Not one of the mighty victorious battles which the American Legion and other veterans associations in this post-war era of peace has come to it without an intense struggle.

From a reluctant government it wrung the soldiers' bonus. The veterans were told that the payment to them of the adjusted compensation which could, in slight measure, recompense the financial loss they suffered by their absence from home and business and work on the field of battle would turn the national treasury topsy-turvy. They were told that they didn't want it; that it represented the avarice of a noisy minority.

The veterans knew better then and they know better now. More than 3,700,000 veterans applied for it. The payment of it by a reluctant government not only left a substantial surplus in the treasury; it appeased the resentment of the veterans who found their government cold to them and their jobs occupied by the patriots who had remained at home; it unleashed a buying power which converted the post-war depression into the happy era of prosperity for which the once grudging politicians later claimed the credit.

The veterans had to fight for the bonus in order to win it. They had to fight for proper hospitalization for the maimed, disabled and others who will suffer forever the loss of physical and mental health. They had to fight for civil service preferences. They had to fight against the unforgivable thievings of the monies appropriated for the care of their suffering buddies. They had to fight for proper compensation for their emergency officers who shared with them the horrors and hurts of No Man's Land and the first-line trenches.

The Hearst newspapers, including the Boston Evening American, can speak of these battles on the recent fronts with authority because these newspapers have always and ever been in the front rank of these struggles, shoulder-to-shoulder with the veterans.

What justice they have gained has been by the intense, unending struggle which marks life on this earth.

Fortunately for our country, this organization, whose members will take on an increasing influence in our national affairs as they acquire experience with them, has completed a survey of the military policy at present and of the efforts being made to sap the national defenses through London conferences, League of Nations alliances and by kept international propagandists.

Out of their survey and out of their own experiences as soldiers in the time of need, these veterans say as an organization:

"To further combat pacifism, each Legion Post should promote in its community a thorough understanding of the problems of an adequate National Defense.

"In peace time, the majority of our people give little, if any, thought to the question of National Defense.

"Our right thinking people believe with the American Legion that the United States should be prepared to defend itself.

"These same people realize that war has not been effectively banished from the world.

"The history of the United States offers what is probably the strongest evidence for the necessity of an adequate national defense. On the average of once every 25 years war has come to America. In every instance the cost in lives and treasure has been dear."

These men, with their mothers, their wives and their children, having borne the burden of war and the hurts of war, are surely the last who would want war again. Their experience has been written in the blood of it. And they know, if our statesmen do not, that the readiness for defense, is, first, the best guarantee against war, and, secondly, the surest, because it is the quickest, way of ending the travail of war when war unfortunately and unavoidably comes.

It is defense that keeps us out of war; it is dangerous, conspiring political alliances with foreign nations whose problems are different than our own that is likely to put us into war.

The American Legion by fighting in peace times for a defended, independent America, can win as notable a victory as its members ever achieved on the field of battle.

Praise for Ferry Victory

But Don't Forget Mayor and Com. Rourke

Many messages of congratulation come from the people of East Boston for uniting with them in what is now a successful contest against the closing of the East Boston ferries. One citizen writes:

"Whenever we have needed a real friend in our civic affairs, we have invariably turned to the Boston Evening American."

Thanks. We can add only that a newspaper should engage aggressively in these affairs affecting the comfort and progress of the community and its people if it is to lay any claim to their respect and affection.

Don't forget Mayor Curley and Commissioner Rourke. It is they who made the decision that keeps the ferries running.

Hats Off to Honor Men!

Congressional Medal Highest Award for Heroes

Our hats come off to the Congressional Medal of Honor men here for the Legion convention.

The sober little medal they wear for personal valor on the field of battle is the highest honor which any country bestows on its heroes.

Because it is the gift of merit, not of kings and emperors and dictators swayed by personal prejudices but conveyed by the vote of the chosen representatives of all the American people.

Our State's Glories

An average of 25,000 persons per day is attending the magnificent Massachusetts tercentenary exhibition at the Commonwealth Armory. If you are not one of this number, you can indeed count yourself unfortunate.

Did you know that Massachusetts was the first to establish a Department of Health for the care of its people? The first State tuberculosis hospital? The first cancer clinic and cancer hospital? The first school for crippled children? The first industrial school for boys and for girls? The first minimum wage law? The first child labor law? The first normal school? The first medical inspection of school children? The first mutual savings bank? The first Highway Commission?

These and countless other civic achievements for the well-being of the people stand to the honor of this Commonwealth and they are depicted in exhibits original in nature and unique in character. By all means see this show. It will make you proud of Massachusetts.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

Diary of a Modern Pepys Strolling on Broadway

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—Diary of a modern Pepys: Out early to market and inquired of a lady I mistook for Louise Groody, "What are you doing here?" and judging me a flirt she flounced away. So buying Malaga grapes, head cheese, briny Ghetto pickles and the strongest white radishes I ever tasted.

Homeward I recalled the skit where the starving actor McIntyre begs something to eat from the pompous Heath who replies: "Didn't I give you a rad-did-dish Thursday?" And skipping through the house caroling: "I bring thee rad-did-dishes," but no one laughed—just another Pagliacci!

With my mother-in-law to the Capitol, which has the politest ushers in town, and to dine at an Hawaiian inn, but no music, which was the excuse for our visit. Then home and tidings that Douglas Fairbanks was at work on a rousing film, choking off rumors of his retirement. To bed.

Most New York department stores allow employes a percentage on purchases in the establishment, provided it is something worn at work. If a man buys a business suit he receives a reduction, but if a sport or dress suit he pays full price. To prevent employes from buying for families or friends at a reduction, they may buy only own sizes in articles and must try them on in the store.

* * *

One department store has for years provided a Christmas surprise for D. A. customers—that is, customers depositing money for charges against it. On January 1 the firm sends each customer a check for two per cent of the yearly purchases.

The baim has been squeezed out of Gilead this morning. Ten glasses of elegant home-made jelly arrived by parcel post smashed to smithereens. And a bear hug for Judge's suggestion to parcel post shippers of ice cream to mark each shipment:

"If not delivered in three days never mind."

And John Ringling receives a smart suggestion for billing the man fired out of a cannon across his circus arena daily. It is: "The Big Shot."

Overheard: A maid calls across the court to a maid in another apartment:

"I saw Garbo again last night. She's sad-eyed me the last time!"

* * *

New York seeks a better name—and it's about time—for its "Department of Plant and Structures" appearing on city buses as the operating head. Almost everybody believes it is a botanical suggestion like "Plants and Flowers." Thus it is a constant mix-up, but the title is really meant to convey building plants and building structures. The singular "Plant" is about as clear as several other things in this Tammany mismanaged town. While improving the name they can improve the buses and not make anybody mad, too.

And while knee-deep in this uplift work we wish some semi-colon factory would send an expert to show the correct way to place their wares. In a magazine piece out today I have three where they haven't any business to be at all. I'm a dash boy, anyway.

A psychoanalyst tells me about a patient, who, although he stands terrorized, visits a local zoo weekly to watch a gliding King cobra slither about a cage. He departs with a raging headache, but cannot stay away. A 10-hour-a-day job might break the habit.

I went along with a friend to one of those "by appointment" gymnasiums where they give $25 an hour "treatments." After gravely pecking under his eyelids, trying out his knee twitches and other monkey doodles, they resorted to the Bowery expedient of "ganging" him. Or so it seemed to me, for they all pounced on him at once at the finale. He hobbles about like a bounding acrobat who tripped on the last camel. You can get the same kind of "treatment" free calling a night club bouncer a big bum. At least I did once.

That fool Boston of mine, just back from a long walk, rushed to a laundry basket, pulled out the lower section of a pair of pajamas, dragged it sidewise into our grand parlor, crawled under the piano and is now taking a nap on his back with paws in the air. His idea of comedy is certainly not mine. Also if I were him I'd shuck myself of a few fleas or move over to Third ave.

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

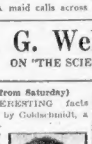
SOME INTERESTING facts were discovered by Goldschmidt, a German zoologist, when he was crossing different species of gipsy-moth, of the genus Lymantria.



H. G. Wells

Here, also, there are rival male-producing and female-producing genes; normally one set out weighs the other completely. But in different species of gipsy-moth the genes seem to work at different rates.

In the European species they are fairly slow. But in the Japanese species the whole tempo of the life-cycle is swifter, and the genes are more active. Let us, for the sake of simplicity, begin by considering female moths.

All females will have male-determining as well as female-determining genes at work, but normally the female ones are in the majority, and whatever female-determining substances they are generating is in excess over the opposed substance produced by the male gene.

But by crossing different species curious results can be obtained. Female moths can then be produced in which the female genes are slow workers, the male genes quick workers.

The moth begins to develop as a female, because of the female genes' initial majority.

But meanwhile the male genes have been producing their male determining substance at a great rate; and their production catches up with, and eventually surpasses, that of the female genes, so that the moth finishes its development as a male.

The result is an inter-sex in which those organs or parts of organs which are laid down early are female in type, while those which appear later are male. And the reverse creature, starting off as a male and then becoming female, is also obtainable by appropriate crossing.

Indeed, by choosing his strains of moth, Goldschmidt has been able to produce any degree of intersexuality he likes.

The earlier in development the moment when the original underdog genes catch up with those of the opposite sex and become top-dog, the more the creature is transformed away from its original sex.
